                   Hi all. I am back. I didn't go see Merlin today. I have talked to the vet twice, and the tech twice. He is doing fine. No better, no worse. If he does get worse they will call me immediately. I was just a mess today. Haven't eaten since Thursday, and no sleep. Got some soup and a fitful nap. Some calls from friends. I feel better now, but still miss Merlin. They did more tests today, and he is on pain meds, antibiotics (high white cell count) and appetite stimulant. I amgoing up tomorrow to see him. Don't mean to bring down the chat room. I come here to be happy!

Stay with us here for a while, Becky. You're in good company and we can be somewhat of a diversion from your burden. You need to gt something to eat. It doesn't have to be much; but you need to keep up your own strength. Think about going to see Merlin tomorrow if you can. As hard as it is for you, he needs your encouragement. Sleep may not be easy for you, but get some rest. HUGS \stackrel{f u}{=}

       I really like the closeup picture of the monarch's face, with it still clinging to the remains of the chrysalis. The curled up proboscis is a wonder of nature.
       And I love the distinct markings! Once they fly for the first time it's hard to get this close again.

       Yes, I did get a load of laundry in, the kitty litter cleaned, the dishwasher emptied and gave DH a quick hug for doing the dishes (bonding! 🙂 ). Then back to the computer, which is sitting on the corner of my sewing table so I can work on this (no cussing allowed by the Sheriff!) quilt. I'ma bit more excited about the quilt today though because my shopping was successful and I found 108" wide fabric that will be perfect for the back of the quilt. The print really adds a lot to the overall pattern of the piece. It was boring; now I'm thinking it might turn out OK.

          Sorry, I need a road map over there. Yes there is chat - lots of back and forth talk about how to kick off smurfs, how to report abuse, etc. I don't know what the posts in different colors mean. Only know that Carlos posted in red. That chat room always moved to fast - too many trivial chatter, etc. and I never got involved.

          We shouldn't even try to compare, Lynn. They spoiled us! We knew them so well, but we don't know these new owlets. If we spent time with them, they would endear themselves to us - I know they would. Not the same as Molly & her babes, but enjoyable in their own right.

Bonnie, just add your avatar from this site if you can't get it to link through FB! Click on your avatar where you start a new post, then upload your chubby baby from your new laptop. You will have to transfer your photo to the new laptop first, though, either by emailing it to yourself from the old computer or copying it

                           Annie, Becky was here a while ago. Merlin couldn't walk yesterday, so she took him to the vet/dinic. I don't know if he's coming home today or not.

                   While the chat room has been quiet, I've been organizing some history notes for a chronology of history of sawmills, industry and narrow gauge railroad for our Historical Society. A March 10, 1883 clipping from a county newspaper - "The thermometer was twenty to twnety-six below on Friday morning.
                    It has averaged fifteen below for a week. No trains have passed over the Sandy River railroad since Wednesday." That's DARNED cold for March, even in Maine - and we think winters are rough now !!

                    When I moved to Maryland, the ground used to freeze solid every winter. It has not done that in a while.
                          It would be fun to see a plot of winter temperatures for the past 100-200 years. Iceland was warm when the Vikings settled there and got cold later.

                          Interesting, Mary. I use Google Books to do a lot of research. There used to be times when Portland Harbor (Portland, ME) froze over. Ferries couldn't run and people had to walk over the ice from the Casco Bay islands.

              Great shots, Lynda! I've seen that phenomenon with the yellow swallowtails before, when I was hiking. I even looked it up, but all I remember is that there is some mineral in the urine and scat that they need.
              I can't believe you've got so many hummers all on your feeder at one time. My friend's feeder has 4 ports, but they all fight so that there's only one hummer at a time on it!
              Today, 16:31:19 - Flag - Like - Reply
              The number of hummers has tapered off a lot and I don't know why. The young should be off the nest now (or very soon). I usually have 2 feeders on a double shepherd hook pole and they always favor jut one. I can put the feeders 20 - 30 ft. away from each other and the males will drive the other away from both

      I'm "chuffed" to meet you folks again!!! Just back from a great New England baked bean supper at a nearby Grange hall - 3 kinds of home baked beans, homemade biscuits and brown bread, some other casseroles, coleslaw and other salads, homemade pickles and a good selection of homemade pies. I'm STUFFED!! Interesting posts and pictures below. I understand JH is getting some fainting goats to keep his grass down??

Your wildlife, moth, beetle and butterfly photos are all beautiful. I love the colors and varieties of moths and butterflies. Other insects I tolerate and the stinging, biting, wood-destorying ones I loathe. I was cutting some brush around our property a couple of years ago and cut down a slim, tall sapling that was bowed and leaning over the lawn. With it came a huge paper wasp's nest full of angry wasps. 20 to 30 stings aren't fun!!! We also used to pick wild blueberries in an area that had many ground hornet's nests and huge ant hills the size of a basketball with small biting ants - not unlike fire ants in the South...

Sorry you got stung. You do know that the paper nest wasps eat mosquitoes? If they are in a place where they may be safely ignored, they are beneficial.
              Ground hornets are just plain mean.

              OK - will take your word for it 😕 . It was partly my fault because I distubed them. I had to take another start of a nest down yesterday from the gable end of the house in the peak under the overhang.

Clever idea, Barb. I like the "recycled" aspect, too. I used to make oriole feeders that held 1/2 orange from aluminum cat food cans, - a hole in each side; a 1/4" sharpened dowel stuck thru the holes and the orange half (also acts as a perch for the oriole) and a small hole in the top for a hanging wire Afternoon, everyone. Back inside from mowing (looks like a few others had the same plan) only I'm not finished yet. Caught a sting from one of my neighbors, right in the calf muscle, ouch! Anyway, thought it was funny to check in and see so may insect photos and stories, and of course Barb just checking in right after mowing.

      I'll finish the yard tomorrow, right now I'm gonna shower and get ready for dinner with my more hospitable neighbors. About the only solace I have with the former is knowing (s) he is now resting peacefully with my dear friend buzzy, from a while back.

Afternoon all. Back from errands and lawn mowing--not a single t-stormappeared and we had mostly sunny skies! and it it hot!
While I was mowing I could hear a piercing bird scolding me every time I passed by a particular pine tree. Afterward I saw a tiny wren and her family is living in the birdhouse below. We put up these coffee can bird houses about 9-10 years ago. We knew birds were nesting in the two that are left and saw sparrows in the other one and assumed sparrows in this one. I was wrong.
I was also surprised I could hear the wren over the noise of the mower. The wren is the blur as s/he leaves the nest.

       Patty, these bird houses usually have sparrows in them. My husband was thrilled to hear it was a wren family and not a sparrow family. We can hear the little ones peeping inside.
       We grew birdhouse gourds one year and those were a lot of fun to hang up the following spring. Those have all rotted away.

Barb - from the loud sound of it's scolding, it could be a Carolina Wren. They are tiny birds that make a BIG sound - even louder than House Wrens! Next time you see it, look for a prominent white stripe that goes over it's eye and sweeps back. If you see that, it's a Carolina Wren. If it is overall browinish with no eye-stripe, then it's probably a house wren.

Well, since everyone is posting insect and flower pictures, here are a couple of mine...
LOL, the Carpenter bees bombard my little patio each spring, so I learned a method to Take Em Out - and improve my back hand 😃

      Not really sure what kind of flowers they are... Last fall I sprinkled some seeds from an inexpensive Boxed Mix of wildflowers touted as a "Hummingbird Mix"....Not sure about the hummers but it keeps the Other Bees busy!!
       Darn capenter bees can do some damage - and yes the aggressive monsters really tic me off when they dive bomb my head!!

This is my bird story of the day...on the way to work this morning in the dark, there was a goose on the highway. Fortunately no cars around me at the moment so I was able to herd him/her off. Hopefully he/she stayed off the road. There were several cars that came up on me while I was doing that. Silly goose...now I know where that expression came from!

Beautiful pictures everyone! My son and have been exploring more on our back yard... hubby got a bird feeder/nest for us (he was probably thinking "im not getting an owl box") we have sooo much birds is exciting!! cardinals, robins, blue jays and some more that I don't know. We have wild turkeys, chipmonks, sneaks...we are having more fun/exploring nature know after this wonderful experience... I haven't been able to post pictures here more than one time.

Running errands today, we decided to stop at the Elephant Bar for some fortification! I didn't make the connection until we were inside, that this is the same chain that Carlos and Donna frequent in San Marcos. We were sitting at the bar and couldn't see the patrons directly across from us because of the liquor display in the middle, but we could hear them talking about being retired and how much fun they were having traveling around in their RV. It didn't sound like Carlos but I had to check before we left just to make sure. Wouldn't it have been fun if it was them?

It was actually head height and almost appeared over night! The wasps were huge but were a lot 'friendlier' than our normal ones in that they didn't appear to be bothered by anyone being around - in fact they just ignored us! It was a stunning nest - I think my customers daughter had it when it was empty to take to her kids school in London.

BAck in March when we were first chatting someone mentioned the fact that CP didn't have owls and I looked it up then. I don't recall all the details but it K8orlando (It's ME: Owlosaurus!) had to do with the strong rodenticides used when NYC became overrun with rats. The owls ate the poisoned rats and died. Wiped out enough of the population to end it for the owls there. I'm sure any that fly back into the park - unlikely, but possible I guess - could fall prey to the same poisons which are \ st \ il \ in \ use. \ So \ many \ restaurants, \ so \ many \ residents, \ so \ many \ garbage \ cans = so \ many \ rats! \ The \ city \ uses \ poison. \ The \ other \ raptors \ aren't as susceptible because they hunt during the day so their primary food is pigeons, not rats.

Marla, can you give me some information on this?!?!? My husband studied in a music program there in 1974. It was through a US university - the University of Evansville, I think. He would LOVE to return for a reunion! He was there for only a summer exchange program but it was a wonderfultime for him and he remembers it fondly. If you go through Grantham, please stop in at the Gregory Gregory Arms and have a pint (or two) for us!

          That's not my photo! Sorry to mislead you! I got it online because all but 2 of the caterpillars went off to spin their cocoons elsewhere, and the two that did emerge flew off before I could photograph them. I'm creating my own Field Guide on my computer and I wanted to have a picture of the butterfly to go with the ones below.

          Just for myself, Natalie. After 30 years of using field guides of all sorts, I have very firmideas about what I think should be in them! So I'm doing this just for my own gratification. I used to get so frustrated by existing ones!

This little guy is a Dogbane Leaf Beetle. They feed on Apocynum androsaemifolium, commonly known as Dogbane or Indian Hemp. One day as I was hiking, I came upon a group of the plants that were literally covered with these beetles. The sun was shining on them, and they looked like a huge heap of jewels!

Thanks, Lisanne!! I'm reluctant to go owl-hunting in Central Park without a bit more guidance. Central Park is miles long and there must be hundreds of thousands of trees. I need to search the Internet for news of families roosting there. I would LOVE to see an owl family in the "wild". (Can you imagine, the "wild" for me is Central Park! LOL)

Lisanne, here is a March 16, 2010 posting by the fellow who keeps the Urban Hawk website:
        "Eastern Screech-Owls have been reintroduced to Central Park over the last twelve years. I've enjoyed monitoring themover the last five years.
        This winter some friends and I kept track of what we believe is the last surviving pair from the reintroductions. Unfortunately, just after the pair started nesting, they lost their cavity to two squirrels and the male owl disappeared and is presumed dead.
        The female continues to stay in the area. Each night she calls to advertise her availability to other owls, but no one answers."

Kathleen.. I don't know if your still on here, but I read your post down in the basement about your chemo. My friends son who is 24 yrs old married and has a 2 yr. old daughter is in a hospital finishing up on some harsh chemo treatments. His leukemia came back on Memorial Day weekend. We are all in shock over this, he had been cancer free for nearly 3 years. I talked to his mother yesterday and she said they had done a bone biopsy Thursday, but haven't got the results back. The doctor said, he will have to go through some more chemo treatments.
Casey has pneumonia in his left lung. He is very weak and not eating. I read you post I still have hope for him. We have a lot of people praying for him and even on the Eagle site in California where I keep update post on him.

        Katie.....My thoughts and prayers are with you and your family. Chemo is such a tough journey. I could feel my body being poisoned at the same time you can be 'Chuffed to Bits' if you're really happy! 😃

These are my favorites - as a friend would say, very high CQ (Cute Quotient). As for the ringing not bothering them, you're right, they're cool with it.
       Which is why I wish Molly's brood had been ringed. If there is a sequel from San Marcos, would be good to know where they turn up.

Saturday, June 19, 2010,10:38:14 AMGood morning from Purdy, WA. It is a sad morning for me. I miss my Merlin. I called the clinic when I got up. He is still doing the same. It took 3 people and a sling to take out side this morning. He is not eating well either. She is going to give him an appetite estimulant and see if that works. I will probably leave him there today. I want so bad to go see him, but I know it will upset him to see me, and then to have me leave again. I amtorn. My heart is just breaking right now. I slept with his favorite toy, his squeaky stuffed turtle, last night, and am carrying it around with me now. My house and heart are so empty without him.

   The Rainbow Bridge
    On our side of heaven is a place called Rainbow Bridge. Whenever an animal dies that was very close to us, it goes to Rainbow Bridge. Behind it are wonderful meadows and hills for all our friends, where they can play together and flying around. There is enough food, water and sunshine and our friends are there warmand cozy.

        well, I just watched Carlos and Donna's goodbye. I had a few sniffles, a little disappointed - it was short and brief! lol! ... THAT is the best I suppose, short and sweet - to the point, what more can one say - we know how the owls affected our hearts. I view everything a little differently now - and see SO many things "out there" that make me think OWL! thanks Chery!! interesting to know that the owlets truly fledged and the monogomous couple are still hanging out . . . . will be interesting to see what they bring for next year. . . Well, off to swing some clubs . . . Good day 'owl!

       Becky, I just noted on the other chat that there was discussion about cafe press. It seems that they managed to shut down the non-apporved sites on it selling Molly stuff so the only one left is Carlos's.

Becky, just catching up on here. I have absolute faith in Dr Cook & her staff. They will do all they can to help Merlin. I know how hard it is to be home without him & how empty it feels. My cats & dogs ARE my family, & I do all I can for them. It is so hard when they are sick and have to stay at the vets & you have to go home. You are in my thoughts & I amhoping Merlin will come home tomorrow.

Evening everyone! My neighbour turned up for a 'needing support' visit - so we made short work of that bottle of wine LOL! Becky - loads of love to you and I hope Merlin improves soon, if you do go and see him give him a big sloppy kiss fromme

... and Maria, yes I amin the UK and where you are going is about glad I did. I think I will go see him today after what Hazel said down below. It will be hard, but I think it is best. You must live in Kitsap if you go there. My something with your scent on it. Will make himfeel more secure, like you are with him. I had a cat once named Merlin.

One more and then I'll quit. Decided to go to a good New England baked bean supper tonight at a grange hall in a nearby town. People in this area seem to eat early suppers (still on farmer's schedules I think). This one starts at 4:00 p.m. EDT. Oh well, as long as I don't have to cook on a hot day . . . . and the home cooked food and pies are usually SO good.

GREAT IDEA! MAKE YOUR OWN POSTAGE STAMPS!
My friend just sent me a sheet of 44 cent stamps with my artwork for a children's book published earlier this year, HECTOR'S FLIGHT TO FRIENDSHIP.
What a great idea to pass along to such creative people here. You could have you favorite owl shots, your pets, your guilts, artwork, photos babies etc.
commemorated into official US Postage. Go to Stamps.com. (Official US Government website) LOVE kathleen Does Carlos object to not for commercial use of his screen shots and his photographs? I thought that since the stamps, being made for personal use, might be okay. We should probably clarify that here. I probably wasn't visiting this site when Carlos conveyed his opinion and intentions.

Bill - I did watch Threshold again yesterday. Got all the way through it this time, without falling asleep (absolutely no indication of its content, merely my point of exhaustion upon first watching it.). Loved the memories that film brought back, mainly because I was but a young child and likely watched those exact same planes (if not a few of the same pilots!) performat air shows in the mid 70's. I was speaking with my dad yesterday, about the filmand having met you here, he is a Navy veteran and still stands in awe at almost any ceremonial flyby. Dad reminded me that, somewhere tucked away in storage, I have autographs from all of the Blue Angles and Thunderbird pilots, and from the Golden Knights which were at those air shows. Now I have to go on a trek to find the autographs, just to see if I have any of the ones in the film.

Here is an awesome website about raptors in Central Park and NYC in general. There is even a youtube video about the hawks at SJTD!

Good morning from Purdy, WA. It is a sad morning for me. I miss my Merlin. I called the clinic when I got up. He is still doing the same. It took 3 people and a sling to take out side this morning. He is not eating well either. She is going to give himan appetite stimulant and see if that works. I will probably leave himthere today. I want so bad to go see him, but I know it will upset him to see me, and then to have me leave again. I am torn. My heart is just breaking right now. I slept with his favorite toy, his squeaky stuffed turtle, last night, and am carrying it around with me now. My house and heart are so empty without him.

       Becky, thanks so much for the update. Everyone here today has wondered how you and Merlin were doing today. It's so hard for anyone when their pets are ill. Knowing that you live alone and Merlin is your constant companion 24/7, I can only imagine how hard this is for you. As others have done, my heart goes out to you and I'm wishing and praying for the best. A very long distance hug to you.

Becky, Go and visit him. We always visited our sick little animals when they were at the vets. We just lost our Momcat a couple of months ago. She was at the vets for 2 days before she passed and we visited her both days. They know you are their and it doesn't upset them not to leave with you. It is so good for you to visit. We had a bird in the hospital for 14 days one winter. We slipped and slid to visit her every day. Take him his favorite treat if he has one. Please it will do you both so much good. May God help you at this time in your life. My prayers are with you. Peace, Hazel 🤤

       It's mostly a matter of perspective. Their space in the TA nest is much larger than we were used to seeing Molly's brood in. The camera is also very different. The TA camera has a longer focal length lens, and the only light is in-line with the camera, giving a flat lighting effect similar to using flash on a point and shoot camera. Molly's box had two IR lights, adding shape and definition to the owlets, much like a studio portrait photographer would use. Not to mention how much closer Molly's owlets were to the wide angle lens of that camera.

Well i've wasted at least a couple of hours trying to solve the problem of not seeing the TA Owls! Thanks for your help James but nothing seems to be working! I can see all the other sites and some of them use WMP so I don't know whats wrong! I say I can see all the other sites but Camera 1 of the Dutch Little Owls hasn't been working most of the day - I know they removed them to weigh and ring them this morning so I don't know if its because of that or if its just me again - I can see the Barn Owls on the same site so who knows!. Also I'd intended to finish working on my personal accounts this afternoon, which I haven't even looked at for months - just opened the file and I haven't done anywhere near as much as I thought I had!!! What I should do is just shut everything down and concentrate on that - but I may just leave most of it until tomorrow - and open a bottle of wine and chat here instead! 😃 Today, 09:14:30 – Flag – Unlike – Reply

Did you try using just the Chrome with this address:

Sorry you're still having problems. Not sure why the WMP files give so many trouble. Ive been spending the better part of the morning cleaning out and reorganizing contact lists, wish lists, phone lists, email lists, old photo orders, even older emails from coworkers 6+ years in the past. I've accumulated a lot of cruft over the years! Funny how some names pop right into mind while scanning the archives and others I have to dig through wondering why I ever needed to talk to those people.

thats the one that i've had bookmarked and been using - absolutely no idea why it suddenly won't work - maybe i'll try again tomorrow, but i'm about

Natalie, you might notice posts below about Becky and Colleen. Becky's Merlin suddenly lost the use of his legs (hind I believe) yesterday. She was frantic trying to find a vet and worry about getting the 100 lb. dog to the car. She found one of the vets who had treated Merlin before and left himovernight at the 24/7 clinic. I don't know if any more news from her today. Colleen hd a terrible thunder and wind storm go through her neighborhood. Trees and wires down everywhere. She reported back that she was OK and no major damage to her houe, but fire, police etc. were all over trying to clear the roads.

James - Help!! .... If you can please!! As of some time yesterday i've been unable to view the TA Owls site - the media player starts to load then just gives up - I've looked on-line for fixes and tried a few things but appear to be getting no-where!! I've actually removed it at the moment and when I go on the TA site it asks me to download the plugin - I've already been through this process once and it didn't work so is there a different plug in I can use - incidentally it keeps on about it being a plug in for Firefox - I did use Firefox for a little while but I/ve been using Chrome for ages now - and up to yesterday I had no problems??

       Open Windows Media Player. Go to File, -> Open URL... and paste in this URL - http://video.tau.ac.il/General/birds/2010/index.asx
       If you don't see a menu at the top with "File" as the first option, then right-click on the area at the top and go to View, -> Show Menu Bar. (or just press Ctrl-M)
       If that link will not open in WMP, then you may need to update WMP or change some security settings - which ones, I haven't a clue. BTW, that link should also open in any browser window, provided the plugin for WMP is functioning properly.

      Guess I should have asked first - Windows or MAC? Another thing that may be a problem: If you're using a UK/EU approved version of Windows, then I believe WMP is disconnected from the operating system by mandate. (could be mistaken, but I think I remember the British/EU lawmakers ruling on that some time ago, in an effort to break Microsoft's "monopolistic practices", so there may be some manual installation necessary for those affected.)

       I'm using Windows Vista and have been for months and months didn't have a problem until yesterday - and I don't think any updates were installed or anything that have caused the problem. Another question - when I open WMP - there is no File or Tools options - I just get the library etc? what am I doing wrong??

       I think the territorial thing applies to many species. We have just Ruby-throated ones here and they spend more time and energy chasing each other away. We have a couple of males that wait patiently on a nearby branch or on top of the feeder post just to chse others away. And, when the really get their dander up they go into the courtship like routine of a constant "U" flight pattern up and down over the feeders

After looking at so many different humming bird photos (so many different breeds) this is the closest one I found that looks like mine.
They move so fast that it is hard to get a good look at their coloring. I know though that the makes have a brilliant scarlet color on the.
So after some research I think mine might be an ANNAS Humming bird.

      Based on your location, nest in garage, and picture included, I believe it to be an Anna's as well. It is to early for looking for gourget coloring. If back is predominatly green it would be important. Straight beak and length also says Anna's. Lucky you. I have Hummers (Anna's), but can't spot the nests. Two Ingrid, do the hummingbirds reuse their nests? If not, can you dislodge it and keep it, perhaps use it in a potted plant as a decorative object? My Mother was a florist in her later years. She used to incorporate tiny birds nests into fancy floral arrangements. I don't recall that she ever used hummingbird nests, though. Today, 07:39:21 - Flaq - Like - ReplyMarla Woody Dillsaver

I would imagine all sorts of moths, flies and insects would find an owl owl box a perfect enviornment to deposit eggs. I think I'm glad that Carlos decided to clean out at least some of all that warm, moist "yuck" from his box. I don't think that will deter owls from returning. It certainly will still have the "used" smell and future owls can lay their own carpet.

Good morning. Dropped by earlier to scroll thru what little chat there was during the night. Just another quick check to see if any word yet from Becky or Colleen. Takes me a while to remind myself that with everyone in diffrent time zones it isn't necessarily 9:45 a.m. for everyone else 🐸 Will dheck in again later. Going to try to work outside for a while, but it's already 80 degrees and pretty humid, so I doubt I'll get much done.

I don't mind the heat - it's the humidity that gets to me. But, we don't have too many of those days in Maine. It's been an unusually warmand early Spring. Earlier this week we had 2 nights of frost warnings and it did get into the mid-30's. We generally have 3 seasons here - winter, mud season and August !!!

      It's going to be 90 here in Bayonne tomorrow - sheesh, I might as well be living in Florida! You're so right about the humidity, Lynda - it just saps the strength right out of you!

Is there a PDF available for chat from 8 on into the night last night? I was wondering how Becky's Merlin is. Or does anyone know?

       Becky took Merlin to the vet last night, and they're keeping him there for observation and tests.

       Yes, thanks ladies for the update. I came in just to check on Becky & Merlin. We're starting to replace a fence today.

      Every time we rebuild our fences it just happens to be the week that it hits 100 degrees! It has happened 2 or 3 times.
