KHM :) Good morning all. So sorry, Becky to hear about your dear Merlin. Today, 07:56:33 - Flag - Like - Reply

Ingrid Oh my, I was hoping to hear better news about Mer in this morning. But that was not to be. So sorry Becky know how hard that is to take. You will always miss him and he will also be in your heart forever. This may seem strange to many of you but having had many losses in my life I can only say it is true if you believe. In the coming days you may experience a little light in the corner of your eye. Should you turn to look at it it will be gone. It will be a message from the one you lost telling you all is well and please know I am with you. If you are open to this it will ease your pain. Really I am not a nut but just wanted to share this with you to give you some comfort thru your tears. Today, 07:49:11 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Lynda C tigermo K8orlando (It's ME: Owlosaurus!) We've shared some fun youtube videos recently so I'm posting this one of an acapella choir doing the old Toto song Africa. It's been around for a while so you may have seen it but if you haven't you are in for a treat! TURN UP YOUR SOUND - you don't want to miss even the beginning.

Kristi from VA Oh Becky! I can just tell from Lynda's post what has happened. Our Fios internet was out all day yesterday due to a Verizon problem, and I was wondering all day what was going on. I got a note from my grand-daughter about my great-grandson:
"It was quiet in the house... too quiet. My suspicions were raised when I heard the sound of metal on metal. I decided to investigate when I found this. (see photo)
It was Harvey. He had climbed up on the dining room table to lick the cake pan we had left out... (for those of you who don't know us, my husband licks his knives every time I turn my back.) It just goes to show how much kids are watching... and how yummy frosting is."

We have been going to MoClips on the Washington coast for 9 years, and spend at least 3-4 nights. We just come up with excuses to get together when ever we can. Colleen, I finished watching your smilebox of the storm damage (what an odd juxtaposition). You have a nice neighborhood and what a blessing to have a neighbor with a chain saw! I wish I could see it without my glasses and I thought, "Why is she taking a picture of a big mushroom?" and then I could make out the small print that it was the snapped root of that large tree! Amazing wind to break that! You might want to install a wood stove and lower your heating bills for a year or three 😊

I do love little squirrels! I use to get them from the local tree company and raise them. I would feed them with a dropper, then a bottle, they lived in the house and then out to a pen outside... pretty soon they were old enough to head out on there own. Love the little buzzers. I use to haul them around with me... got some really strange looks when people at the lights would see my dog and then see the squirrel jumping around... off the dash board, me or the dog. Got some laughs out of that.

I haven't been a daily poster on this site but my thoughts are with you at this painful time. I had to do the "kind thing" for two of my pets in the past, so I understand the pain. I now have three older cats, the time is coming.... It's the downside of pet ownership. I just try to focus on the good memories.

Becky, I just heard the song... Forever Young.... I wanna be forever young. Thought of you and everyone who loves their pets, and we want them to stay forever young! They bring us so much joy and then so much pain when we loose them. Merlin knew how much you loved him and cared for him. I am so very sorry for you to loose your buddy!

Good morning.

Yesterday was strange. My right foot swelled and hurt so I napped a lot. The swelling has gone down.

Nothing bit me, I did not eat a ton of salt... I can't figure out what caused it.

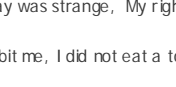

Anyway, it is gone.

YES! I thought they would all get bored since the party was so long, but they were still hyper and running around outside until the last minute and we still had to kick them out the door with their mothers! They did musical chairs, an American Idol contest (one girl said "I want to be a judge, I'm really strict!!!") and a bona-fide scavenger hunt in the neighborhood, and couldn't believe how successful they all were! They had dizza for lunch, then brownies for dessert. after the hunt they came back and made snow cones (brrrr it was only 55 today and cloudy/showery). then played "catch the flag." OHH, and don't forget the silly string fight they had in the backyard, LOL.

Did I say I was pooped? 😊

I am not a sushi fan but my husband and daughter are and I was able to find things I could eat. This is the type of place where there is a conveyor belt with sushion it and you pick up what you want and pay by the plate. Just like they have in Japan. 😊 Plus we also found some sun dresses for my daughter. Overall a productive and fun trip!

They all look active and healthy to me. They've all been running around and eating as would be expected. I think the difference in site and camera setup has many folks puzzled over their appearance, but their actions do not indicate there is anything to be concerned about. There are also many variant bins or types of barn owls, so not every brood is going to look just like others from across the globe.

KBorlando, saw your earlier post that you found the backing for your quilt. Arent the "whole quilt" bakings wonderful? So many colors, patterns, etc. now. I started using them when I was only white or unbleached muslin. Now a lot of batik. prints. etc. Want to see pictures of the finished quilt. I'll bet it's beautiful !!! Good night. Tomorrow ???

For the first time, other than the Quilts of Valor donation quilts, I'm going to have this one professionally quilted on a long arm machine. I just can't do a king sized quilt on my machine. Found out this week that I have to have this to her on July 1 in order to get it back in time to attach the binding and finished for the wedding! I am no where near done!!! It's almost time for panic, which of course is always good as a fall back position. It will depend a bit on how much I can get done tomorrow. (Muttering to herself: "must stay off owl that tomorrow...")

OK, I have been debating with myself all day to post this. But I guess I earlier I will for the "better safe than sorry" train of thought. My credit card that I used to order all the Molly stuff was compromised on June 14, and I found out I guess today when trying to order something else and was denied. I called the credit card company to find out why I was denied, and I was immediately patched through to the fraud department. Two very small transactions ($1.85 and 2.15) were charged online within a few minutes from two very obscure online sites. My account was put on "security hold" after that until I contacted them, which was today. They had tried to call me that day but couldn't get through to me so sent a letter. It's probably in my mailbox.
Long story long, the CC is now canceled and a new one is on the way. I'm not saying it got compromised somehow through ordering Molly stuff, but they are the only things I have purchased with this CC lately.

I received and email today from Paypal that someone on U.K. ebay bought a stereo system for almost $500.00 and used my Paypal account, debiting funds from my checking account. The item was being shipped to an address in Vietnam. Paypal put a hold on my account before the money was debited. I had to go through a verification process and change my password. I since have gone through all of my accounts (Macs, Penneys...etc. and changed all of my passwords. Paypal suggested that all of my online passwords should be changed every three months. It's enough to make you quit shopping online at all!!!!

Thanks for the heads up. I have seen that happen before and it is no fun. I believe the popular thing in CC fraud now is for the thief to make very small transactions which tend to go undetected, gives the holder of the fraudulent info more credibility and allows them to sell off the info for a higher price. Looks like everyone should watch their statements carefully.

A good point, JH (as usual 😊 😊). I do watch our statements much more closely now. I check them online about every week. This ID theft scares the Dickens out of me - scanners installed on ATMs, telephone scams trying to gain your information, phishing emails using logs etc. from reliable companies, etc. I am very close to getting caught in one of those that supposedly came from eBay once - wanting me to verify all of my info (passwords, bank account #, etc). It wasn't from eBay at all but had all the right logos AND my email address.

Thanks for the "heads up", Kathryn. Some red flags must have gone up for the credit card co. to try to reach you about such insignificant charges. We got caught up in the Hannaford security breach (similar to the TJ Max one) 2 years ago. Two charges of $100 were made at a gas station in FL on the same day at the same station. We had already returned to Maine from FL when the charges were made and only found out about it when our bill came. The credit card co. was very good about it as they were able to document charges made in each State on our trip home and a charge made here in Maine the same day the charges were made in FL. But, it's a nuisance to go thru that - cancellation of card, new cards, etc. - and there is a feeling that you have been violated. I do PayPal when I can online, but even that has had breaches.

Mother is sheltering something in a sinister way. And that was an avian being that she dragged to the back of the nest box. I believe! I'm spooked for the moment!

I meant to mention it earlier and then stopped to watch Colleen's slide show. That big "surpin" was brought in by the male (?) a short while ago. Just before he brought it in the female (?) was stepping on & trying to push one of the owlets away from a treat on the right side of the box. The young one didn't seem to want to leave and the female sort of picked it up like a cat would her kitten and moved the owlet out of the way.

If anyone would like to see the storm damage that was happening in my neck of the woods while I was in my basement taking to all of you 😊 last night. Here are some pictures. This is my home and the six closest homes to mine. I am in one picture too, and I really had a bad hair day today, but what the heck.

Major clean-up. Nasty storm! Had to be something to ride out! Trees plucked up by roots! That one tree is so surreal with every branch snapped off leaving the limbs upward and scarred. (Best description I could come up with) Glad you and those you love are safe! Love your two-story house btw!

What a wicked storm. You have such a beautiful house. All of the houses in your neighborhood are very beautiful. I can't believe that one tree that has all of its branches shredded. Thanks for sharing the pics with us. Those cable lines are so huge, they should put them all underground. That's how they look around here too. Huge, fat lines hanging up there, so heavy. There's gotta be a better way. At least your internet connection held up though.

Probably a way to bury those cables and they may after this storm. But, looking at the size of the trees, closeness to the street and sidewalk, etc. wouldn't it cause more damage to the tree roots to try to bury them??

Do you know what amazes me most, Colleen? The fact that there was relatively little damage to the houses vs. to the trees! So glad that everyone was OK!

Thanks for sharing the slide show, Colleen. I don't know how you seemed so relatively calm last night when you posted. I wouldn't have been frightened speechless. I beautil, storybook neighborhood! It makes it so much more real to all of us. So many large, full-grown trees, so much damage. Despite some trees down on neighbor's homes, it is a wonder that everyone didn't sustain more major home damage. The clean up will take time and the scars will linger, but we are all so glad that no one was seriously hurt.

Good night! Thank you for your kind words for Merlin and me today! I bet you miss the mountains, and GREEN! I am sending you some Northwest fresh scent! Awwww, can't you just smell it! (of course I am taking for granted you live on the Peninsula, because you know Dr. Cook)

Yep, will be back to the peninsula in a week. I really do miss the mountains & the water. I'm smelling it only in my memory right now. Kansas is remarkably green, a brilliant green I have not really seen before...verdant green (I think that's the word). Hope you get some sleep tonight, Becky!

Kansas can be quite beautiful! I lived there for three and a half years a lifetime ago. I was surprised at how green it was too. I was expecting flatlands and dusty.

Just one broken window and trees down. Two neighbors of ours had tree through their roofs, but no one was injured. Many huge trees uprooted and just laying on the ground all over.

H all. I am back. I didn't go see Merlin today. I have talked to the vet twice, and the tech twice. He is doing fine. No better, no worse. So he does from friends who will call me immediately. I was just in a hurry. Haven't eaten since Thursday, and no sleep. Got some soup and a fitful nap. Some calls got weird. I feel better now, but still miss Merlin. They did more tests today, and he is on pain meds, antibiotics (high white cell count) and appetite stimulant. I am going up tomorrow to see him. Don't mean to bring down the chat room. I come here to be happy!

Stay with us here for a while. Becky. You're in good company and we can be somewhat of a diversion from your burden. You need to get something to eat. It doesn't have to be much; but you need to keep up your own strength. Think about going to see Merlin tomorrow if you can. As hard as it is for you, he needs your encouragement. Sleep may not be easy for you, but get some rest. HUGS 😊

So cute. Hubby was coming out of a mall at our closest "city" the other day. Just made the turn onto a 4 lane street when he had to stop and had to flash his headlights and turn on his hazard lights to warn other traffic - a mother duck and 8 ducklings parading across the street without a care in the world
