                    Connie, so sorry to hear about your dog & cat. That is one thing I worry about because I travel alot for work. One of my cats has been sick off & on since last October & I hate leaving her because it seems like she goes downhill whenever I am gone. I'll be glad to get home in a week. Plus I am planning on taking the rest of the summer off, if it ever gets to be summer in WA.
                    spent the day in 2 wildlife refuges that are mainly salt marshes, lots of birds. They are major feeding/rest areas for migrating birds. But saw no owls. Pretty tired so won't be on here long.

                       How is the neighborhood clean-up going, Colleen? I peeked at your slide show after I said my goodnights. What a beautiful area! So sad to see all those beautiful trees down. It reminded me of our area here after Hurricane Isabel came through in Spetember of 2003 or 2004 after a very rainy August. The ground was so saturated lots of beautiful old trees just snapped off in the wind.

                           Gee, Bonnie - I've never run into a cat that has a gas problem. Kind of unusual, I think. She's obviously having problems digesting food. Maybe you better ask your vet about it - it could be a symptom of something.

                       Try one of the foods without artificial preservatives or coloring. Most of the major food lines - Meow Mix, Purina and Purina One make one. They usually have "Naturals" in the name. My Cinco is tail-less, and he has a problem with his little butt called prolapse, and that's what the vets recommended to me.
                           He never had the gas issues though.

                        I have no idea. She was rescued from the Aiken animal shelter about 7 years ago. She is definitely larger than my sheltie who weighed 25 pounds.
                            Garnet weighs 34. A beautiful face and sheds like a trooper!!

What a cool name for a dog, Garnet! Luna is definitely smaller than a sheltie. I'm guessing she's 12-15 pounds, tops.

                    I've been watching the fuzzbuckets on the Dutch camera. That was my reward as I cleaned out my bags and prepared for tomorrow. They all sit in the back and work to keep Frank a.k.a. Runtley, Ukkie, Gosh, warm. Well I watched one of the larger ones down a mouse. Then, Momma delivered again and out popped little Frank's head. He scored! He dragged it back behind the pile of fuzz. I assume he ate it back there as there was a wall of fuzz blocking my view.
                    The one on the right was awake starting at the camera. I told him it was not nice to hide Frank from view. I wanted to see what was going on. That owl did the slow wink. I said something to my mother as she had missed it. He winked again. Then, he winked with the other eye ... just to prove he could. Ha, ha, ha ha you can't see what Frank is dong. It amused me.

Hi, Kathryn! Your robin story gave me the shivers. Somewhere on Youtube there's a video of a little owl that flew into someone's sliding glass door and

So now I have a robin story. Me and my daughter and our dog went into the backyard just a little bit ago because the sun finally came out on this dreary day. Our dog saw a robin in the yard, and as usual she went straight for it. Now our dog sounds like a herd of buffaloes when trying to chase a bird and she's never gotten closer than 15 feet to a bird before it takes off. But this time, the bird did not move and she actually nipped it on the wing! 😃 I immediately called her off and put her behind the gate. The poor thing was scared witless, just running around our fence line looking for a way out. I was able to get close to the bird, and it looks like a robin that had fledged recently, it still had some white fluff on it. It was able to fly up about 2 feet to a rock in our backyard but could not fly up high enough to the fence. The bird finally found a crack in the fence and was able to make it out of the backyard into the front. I hope it will be OK. Photos are not too good, but go along with a nearly tragic story with a happy ending. A mother robin has decided to build a nest in the vry top of a Snowball bush in my front yard. I have no idea why as there is very little protection from the elements. I have 11 large maples, some birch, an oak and ash trees in the yard and I'm surrounded by a forest of hardwood trees, all of which would be better cover. Earlir today we heard a loud crash against the picture window of the dining room A quick look and we saw the robin sitting in a nearby tree getting her bearings and recovering from the shock. Yes I do. A few times a finch or smaller bird hasn't been as lucky. Except for one small finch feeder, I stopped feeding the songbirds 2 years ago. We're not here in the winter when the birds really need food. We had a terrible problem with raccoons that year and they can get into and destroy just about any bird feeder there is - in a tree - on a post - squirrel-proof or not. We live-trapped 12 raccoons that summer and moved them to new habitat about 5 miles away. But there is no sense "baiting" them further, and there is always the possibility of bears, too. Liked by Matalie Mathryn R Oh, you can actually see how the robin hit - the imprint of her feet and breast, neck and the side of her face. Wings also! Maybe you should put some of those decals on your window, Lynda. That helps prevent them from flying into glass. One time I had a beautiful Yellow-bellied Sapsucker fly into my window. That IS interseting, Kristi. I would not have thought an owl would take a turkey, even a young one.

Since we are talking turkey, I was showing Natalie's great turkey pictures to my mother. (If you have read the FB posting, you may know that I take care of her since my father's passing. I guess you can debate who takes care of who some days.) Anyway, she grew up on a farm. They used to chase the turkeys and guineas up the trees or up a roost they had built at night. They wanted to protect them from the owls. I asked her if the owls every got the fowl. They did and she gave me a few more details. I will spare you. I'm sure it's dinner time somewhere. She said they hated to see the sound of owls in the fall. Interesting ... at least for me! Today, 16:51:21 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by Jan (Bayonne, NJ) Kathryn R Lynda C

I'd be pretty sure that the barn owls and other smaller owls wouldn't go for a turkey or their young, but a Great Horned Owl is perfectly cabable and does Discussion The largest of American "eared" owls, the Great Horned is exceeded in size only by the rare Great Gray Owl. The Great Horned Owl preys on a wide variety of creatures, including grouse and rabbits as well as beetles, lizards, frogs, and birds, including crows, ducks, and other owls. On occasion, it even captures skunks. It is the largest and best known of the common owls. It is one of the first birds to nest, laying its eggs as early as late January, even when there is still snow on the ground.

The have to fly, however, because they roost in trees at night. Great pix, Natalie. I'm amazed tht those little chicks are flying at all, much less that high up. We see more and more turkeys around here now. Except for the few times they have been in our yard, they stay pretty well hidden in the deeper woods. Several years ago several breeding pairs of turkeys were brought to Maine under a Fish & Wildlife program as the turkey population in Maine was almost non-existant. They have now proliferated to all

I should do this as a reply, but I am afraid you won't see this Chris. Plus, it gives me an excuse to add the stars I always forget and announce that my report cards are done. I can now go make my bed that I will crawl back into in just an hour. I was determined nothing could get done until my report cards got done. The sale mentions just the one picture of the owls. However, if you go to the site, you will note that many, many of the pictures are on sale, not just the one. It is not what is advertised. It is actually confusing as some are regular priced and it looks like there are just a few differences - such as writing on them. See

I love your pictures Natalie. I too, had no idea they roosted, or even flew. How great that you are there to witness it.

It's great, isn't it Lynda? They've made a huge comeback in MA over the years, too....but still, I never get to see them up close and personal like this. They make this lovely, soft clucking sound that I just love. Today, 16:37:19 – Flag – Like – Reply Liked by Market Lynda C Candace Mason Dwyer

Hi, checking in after a long day...saw the turkeys...3 years ago, one romantic Tom stopped traffic on our road by dancing for his new love in the middle of our two lane...18 wheelers and all stopped...We sat and watched and laughed...Today we have over 32 in the flock and they are living on us...seem to like the alfalfa, corn, soybean, and lake water...surounded by trees...They really are very funny... This year 5 Toms were dancing on the hillside and

That's great! Do you think if I put out some canned, rinsed pinto beans for them, they'd like it? So far, it's just been cracked corn.... If you feed birds, the turkeys will probably forage on sunflower seeds. Wild Turkeys are omnivorous, foraging on the ground or climbing shrubs and small trees to feed. They prefer eating hard mast such as acorns, nuts, and various trees, including hazel, chestnut, hickory, and pinyon pine as well as various seeds, berries such as juniper and bearberry, roots and insects. Turkeys also occasionally consume amphibians and small reptiles such as snakes. Poults have been observed eating insects, berries, and seeds. Wild Turkeys often feed in cow pastures. They sometimes visit backyard bird feeders to search for seed on the ground. Turkeys are also known to eat a wide variety of grasses. Today, 17:25:02 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🏄 Natalie Elliott

                       Okay, I was taking one of my breaks from report cards. I knew that Carlos was having his "Father's Day" sale on some of the prints, so I wanted to buy a few.
                       I also bought a mug because I just love, love, love the Oh, Hi print. My favorite - it makes me smile, no matter what. Then, I wanted to check Carlos's blog to see if the McGee full moon one was the one he photo shopped, and I saw that Vacadude just released his coffee mug which is very, very cute. So, yes, I have another mug, and you know what? I didn't need it. Teachers ALWAYS get mugs. It's the go-to present when parents don't know what to buy. At least my teaching sorority group fills old ones and donates them to nursing homes at the holidays. But not my precious owl ones. I will just keep right on drinking my tea

My 13 year old son has started really taking notice now, and it was his suggestion to go for a walk - I think he is finally getting fed up with the XBox!! I was really pleased as it was him that spotted the Deer first. I've always 'looked' but after watching Molly I seem to 'see' even more than I used to, and hear as well - always take my camera now too - just in case!

 Willow's story
       Willow, was found in a building being renovated near Albemarle, North Carolina. She was illegally given to someone who thought if she was raised on their property she would hunt the animals in the area. A friend was concerned about her behavior and so they called Carolina Raptor Center for advice, but by the time she was brought to our facility she was already imprinted on humans. When owls hatch, they look to their parents to learn that they are an owl. Unfortunately, because Willow was raised by people, she never had the opportunity to learn she was an owl, and therefore would not be able to survive on her own in the wild. She came to CRC in her hatching year and has been with us since July of 2007.

      Melody, during our life with our owl family, I became familiar with the phenomenon of human imprinting on owls. I watched a video in which a raptor rehabilitator explained the urgency in returning injured owlets as quickly as possible to an owl environment, so that they did not lose their identity as owls. Poor Willow. I hope she is happy as a human. LOL

Becky --- So sorry to hear about your pal, Merlin. Though the healing will take awhile, it'll happen. Hope you come to the Seattle zoo gathering next Saturday.
After the raptor show at the zoo, there will hopefully be another raptor show in a nearby neighborhood. Perhaps your spirits will be raised by not only our gathering, but by the taking flight of some other special Merlins, falcons that are about ready to fledge. Renewal is a good thing. See you (and the others) for some on the 26thl 🙂

Just checked in for a minute to catch up on news.. My heart aches for you Becky as I have been thru the same. The most human ething a human can do, that's what you did for your wonderful Merlin. I held my dachshund, Maxwell, when the vet put him down, I hated to think of him not being with me but I hated the pain and discomfort he was going thru worse. I loved him that much as you did your Merlin. He looked at me with those soft brown eyes and he actually sighed,
I think in relief, that he was going to a much better place. Know that you'll run with him again some day, he'll be waiting with a big doggie grin on his face.
Happy Birthday to James...I have learned so much from you and from Alton Brown!

great here on SPO. It is the Peregrine Falcon nest box and it is in beautiful living color. There are 3 babies. If you want to see it to here is the site:

Becky -- I wanted to let you know how sorry I am to hear about Merlin. 🤩 I didn't even get to meet him and he touched my heart. Your descriptions of him told us how special he was, and I know he gave as much love as he got.
We lost our Pumpkin almost 8 years go... and the only thing that really comforted me was knowing she'd never be sick or hurt again.\\
When the time is right, I hope you invite another special dog into your heart. Hugs.... Our little Fritzi has really helped complete the healing for me 🙂

Hello from Connie in Pensacola Fl. We are back from a week at Pensacola Beach. The beach is beautiful. No oil in sight. But it is in Perdido Key and Ft Walton Beach. Both sides so it won't be long. Especially with the oil still gushing out. My cat has been missing 3 weeks now and while we were at the beach the man feeding our animals called to tell us that our Rottweiler, Buddy, had died. I am not having a good time. Still have 1 cat but she is not so young. Thanks for listening. And if you want to see the beautiful white sugar sands of the Gulf Coast once more, you better come soon.

Hello from Arizona - I have traveled some more & only been able to skim the chat here and there but I see we have sad news. Please let me first express my condolences to Becky in losing of Merlin. 😉 I can so relate Becky - I lost one of my dogs just this past Jan. after 15.5 years with him. I always like to believe that they go to The Rainbow Bridge where they experience no more pain & only have joy playing with all of the other precious animals who are there. I am lucky in that I have a second dog who has helped relieve the emptiness I feel in my heart. Becky, please know there are those of us here that feel your pain & will keep you in our thoughts. Merlin is in a better place even though he can no longer be with you. May you find peace in your heart Becky. Take care of you now. CAR said it so eloquently below in her post...

Becky, I don't know if you will even see this but I will post anyway. There are no words that will comfort you right now, but having so many caring people does

Happy Birthday James! I am tossing myself "bones" and signing on when I get a certain amount of report cards done. Just got grades on - have to do comments. 😃 I won't post a cake or anything - just send you warm wishes and send a story. This year I went into this very young, attractive 2nd grade teacher's room. (She's 24 if a day.) I had to ask her something. It was my birthday and I asked them how old they thought I was. They said 28! They shaved 10 years off, so I hugged them! Then, I said how old is your teacher. They said 82!!! So as my class went to lunch I had them walk by her room- they pretended to be using canes and walkers and used their old lady and men voices. \\ May you have people think you are 10 years younger, too!

James: Wishing you a very Happy Birthday! May your day be special in every way. You have been such a wonderful MOD to all of us, especially those who needed help with learning new ways to use our computers to enjoy this experience to its fullest. Also, you have been such a hard worker as "Keeper of the

Just this side of heaven is a place called Rainbow Bridge. When an animal dies that has been especially close to someone here, that pet goes to Rainbow Bridge. There are meadows and hills for all of our special friends so they can run and play together.

There is plenty of food, water and sunshine, and our friends are warm and comfortable.

All the animals who had been ill and old are restored to health and vigor; those who were hurt or maimed are made whole and strong again, just as we remember them in our dreams of days and times gone by.

Barbara They all run and play together, but the day comes when one suddenly stops and looks into the distance. Her bright eyes are intent; Her eager body quivers. Suddenly she begins to run from the group, flying over the green grass, her legs carrying her faster and faster. You have been spotted, and when you and your special friend finally meet, you cling together in joyous reunion, never to be parted again. The happy kisses rain upon your face; your hands again caress the beloved head, and you look once more into the trusting eyes of your pet, so long gone from your life but

The animals are happy and content, except for one small thing; they each miss someone very special to them, who had to be left behind.
