I just remember an outrageous costume my partners and I dressed up as. We owned a sandwich/restaurant and had many customers for lunch. On halloween the three of us and the girls that worked for us all dressed up like we were pregnant. I mean really pregnant. Most regulars got the joke but it was amazing how many others were shocked to see all the huge pregnant women working so hard. Today, 22:58:37 - Flag - Like - Reply

The last 3 questions!

1. My first job was in a florists. He had a problem with me because when people would ask what my favorite flower was I was truthful & said carnation (cheap) not roses (expensive)

2. First started watching the owls when they were just eggs. I had periodically looked at the cams on SPO before that. Got hooked somehow in just watching Molly sleeping all day lying (laying) on the eggs

3. Halloween (answered this a long ways down0: Dressed up like a witch to greet kids at the door. Many months later, one kid saw me & said "You're the witch!" It was funny....& I was amazed he remembered hi, everyone. it's been busy here in the chatroom today. i got some much needed fresh mountain air (and waterfall), children time, and, most importantly, chocolate from the chocolate shop 🐸 . my favorite costume was.....so original.....a hobo, of course. i wore one of my dad's old shirts with a pillow stuck in it, and, for some reason, painted my cheeks like a clown, and used a big pretzel for a cigar. i was 11. Okay Janeen - here's my answer for the Halloween costume. We don't dress for Halloween anymore, but we have to dress up every year for Dr. Seuss's bday. If you were paying attention, my picture got posted a bit ago by accident. I had hooked it on my response to Natalie - forgot I did it, and then it posted! OOPS - decided it was a terrible, terrible picture of me. Anyway, we dressed up as literary characters for Dr. Seuss day. This year we were the Wizard of Oz. Guess who I was.

Kristi from VA Before you say a word, this was not typecasting!! I went into the room of the guy with which I teach. I told him that he would be Dorothy. He didn't argue. I told his wife she should be worried. I got this role for the following reason. My kids came in. They were doing their morning work. Announcements were over. All was quiet. I was putzing around and then I just broke loose into the line, "I'll get you ..." See, I can do it spot-on. Scared the stink out of the kids. And apparently, scared the stink out of the secretary. Kristi from VA I have a bit of a drama bug in me, so I love being silly for the kids. I have done tons of wacky things in the last few years all in the name of entertaining the kids. The funny part is that get me out of the classroom or out from behind the keyboard, and I am actually very quiet and introverted! Believe it?

(However, if you ever want to stage a production, I'll road trip. I'm free and easy during the summer before I back in jail at the end of August.) 🙂 Today, 22:36:34 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🏄 Natalie

Hello I'm back after a trip to the store, and a healthy supper of Orville Redenbacher Caramel Corn! I love Janeen's question of the night but I want to bring it up here because it will get buried quickly. A group of us dressed as hippies one year to celebrate at a Comedy Club, and that was fun. And just some clarification - their life expectancy is probably closer to 8-10 years and longevity record from band returns is currently 15 years. If you want to see some more interesting info about longevity determined from band returns, go to: w.pwrc.usgs.gov/bbl/homepa http://w

Another excellent reason for banding - how else would one determine longevity under natural conditions? There are hummingbirds that have returned to the same yard 9 years (buff-bellied) and 10 years (broad-tailed) after being banded. Good evening, everyone....I'm just tip-toeing in.... ELLIOTT! THE TURKEYS CAME BACK TONIGHT....IT'S A SIGN FROM GOD!!!

Hope you've all been having fun...we had company for dinner...we had wild salmon, caught by our friend in New Brunswick, which was incredible! (Not a good sentence . 😌 ) Other good stuff, plus some amazing white wine. I'm a bit high, to be honest (what???!!), but have missed you all. You are the best, every single one of you!

They will likely return often, if not every week. Once they find food sources and safe roosting locations they tend to revisit them regularly. They will however roost in many different places, and use the nearest to where they ended up foraging on that day. I bet they visit your yard for quite a long

Johan's report of today on the Steenuil:

It was hard work last week for the counters. Many prey were not properly identify. Yet, they doggedly counted. A huge compliment for that! They tell us that, in the 5th week 330 young prey entry. Of course, most (189) regarded as unclear, yet neither 8 voles, mice were 4, a mouse and a shrew. Remarkable also the relatively high number of earthworms: 31.

- Lynda...Here is my fave 'covered hot dish'! 1/2 pound bacon 1 pound hamburger 1 medium onion
- 1 can butter beans
- 1 can kidney beans
- 2 cans pork and beans
- 1/2 cup ketchup
- 2 tablespoons vinegar white or apple cider
- 1/2 cup molasses or brown sugar
- 1 squeeze of yellow mustard

Cube bacon and brown. Dice onions and saute in bacon fat. Brown beef and drain. Add other ingredients, using all the juice from each can of beans. I cook this on the stove in a dutch oven, or large pan. You can also put this in the oven in a baking dish on 350 for 60 or 90 minutes, stirring occasionally. It takes weird at first, but let it cook and it is great!

Live Owl Nest Box Cam

I was going to post this earlier....My 'how I found Molly' story. Last year, I had a call from a man in Kentucky. He was looking for a man that was in his Dad's group in the Air Force in WW2. My last name is not common, but this man he was looking for was not a family member of mine. I was interested in his search, and asked him to keep in touch, and gave him my e-mail address. He e-mailed me over the months on what was going on. It is the Swamp Fire, and a very interesting story. He has a web site now, and Discovery is looking at doing their story. He e-mailed me a link to Molly on April 11. I looked, and then went and found the eagles at Catalina Island and watched them for a while. Of course went back to Molly's box, and stayed because of what I was seeing before my eyes every day! And the chat too! My first chat too. So...short story...wrong number = Molly Box and friends for a live time!

Mix in a big bowl and pour into baking dish. Bake at 350 for an hour. Yum, yum!! Good for pot lucks. I got this recipe from a pot luck at Carnation YEARS ago and it is still a fave!

Hi, Becky! Nice to read you again. My variation on your recipe~make it regularly: 1 c. onions (diced) can of cream o'chicken soup (place of mushroom) 16 oz. S. cream 1 whole stick of butter 8 oz. bag o'shredded cheddar cheese 1 c. of crushed potato chips (on the very top before baking) 375* for 1 hour I have occasionally used very small cubed hashbrown/potatoes. The cubes make it more fancy with a ham and such. Otherwise, everything's the same as yours. Mine seems a tad bit more fattening! 😮 I sure am getting hungry again!! 👻

Event C Becky, tried your pork chop/hash brown recipe the other night. The pork chops were great, but I must have used the wrong kind of frozen hash browns - the ones I used were small cubes and they just wouldn't brown 🙁 . I haven't given up on the recipe yet. I know I can get it right 🙂 . Someone posted earlier today (maybe Cheryl) she had used home-made hash browns becaue they don't have frozen ones in the UK. I might try it that way. I always boil exra potatoes just to use as hash browns for anothr meal. Today, 20:01:10 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🌉 Jan (Bayonne, NJ)

Lynda - the best hash browns I ever tasted were my mother's. Like you, she always boiled extra potatoes for hash browns. Her secret was that she fried them in Crisco. The Crisco made them brown so beautifully and taste so good that I couldn't stop eating them! Now, of course, Crisco is a huge nono because it is a trans-fat. In fact, everything I ate growing up is now a no-no; I can't believe I'm still alive! I just saw that Crisco has come out with a non-trans-fat version, so I'm going to make mom's hash browns again. Can't wait!

Exprda C And next year they will tell us that the "new" Crisco isn't good for us. I have to admit that although we eat fairly healthy most of the time I will not give up things like Crisco, real butter, real cheese, salt pork in baked beans and small crisps of salt pork in corn and fish chowders. I don't think that used in moderation any of them will hurt me as much as all the chemicals that are in processed foods and "make believe" foods such as "american" cheese that is labled in small letters "cheese food". My story and I'm stickig to it  $\, !!! \,$

Elliott, I just saw your question. Had some company show up for a bit. We had a storm go right overhead and dump a bunch of water. Kristi from VA I think I said this but I started watching because my co-teacher showed the kids the site. We dissect owl pellets every year. I started checking in and then I got hooked. I lurked a LONG time before I posted. I started lurking right after all the babies had hatched. My major coup was figuring out how to work the site into my lesson plans at year's end so I could watch the 'lets on my big screen at school for 2 solid hours. Again, I think this is a repeat, but after all it is summer rerun season!

Lynda C Late March after Wesley an Pattison had hatched. I mised Austin's hatching by about an hour. I was only checking in a couple of times a day at he time. I used to read the chat, but never joined in until early May (I honestly didn't know that I could just "join" the chat as a grey "head" or even sign in with a name and avatar until then. I thought I had to be signed in to FB or Yahoo, etc. 🤒 ). I joined the chat (and kept watching the owls) becaue I saw what a nice group of people were meeting here, the help and information they offered, the general camaradarie of a group of people with like interests. I was a late-comer, but was welcomed warmly by all. It may have turned me into a true MOD, but I wouldn't take back the experience for anything. Today, 19:46:34 - Flag - Like - Reply

About a week before Max hatched. I don't remember how I found out about Molly, maybe it was here at Sportsman's Paradise because I have checked various cams here since before Molly. Or it could have been through HF's twitter feed.

I think the color camera did it. Carlos ran a top-notch webcam for Molly, McGee, and owlets.

Oh - and I remember clearly watching Max hatch. It was a Sunday morning here, and my sweetle and I were afraid Molly was going to not know what to do and eat the baby! I also missed Weleigh's hatching, but can't remember why?

8	JH (Post Pondering) There is a lot more activity under light of a full moon, across many species. People do crazy things when they can see unaided at night. I once followed a huge group of semi-trucks about 20 miles down an open highway, none of them had head lights on. It was 3am or so and everyone had running lights only. Was quite an amazing sight, and very dangerous and foolish. A cop finally put an end to it by coming on the CB radio and telling the idiots to "get right." I'm sure he could have written tickets all night, otherwise. Today, 20:30:12 – Like – Reply – Delete
2	Lissanne James: I love to drive. Always have my CB with me, although I transmit rarely, just listen. On one of these rare occasions was chatting with a trucker, we were heading N on I-25 in CO, near Monument, which always seems to have the worst weather in the spring. All of a sudden all the S-bound truckers were warning of an oncoming hailstorm. The trucker I was talking to said he was pulling off to the side, told me to pull up my van as close as possible to his bumper, still remember his words, "My windshield can take it but yours probably can't." He was right - all these huge hailstones were flying all around us but I was safe in his lee. Today, 20:54:57 − Flag − Unlike − Reply Liked by @You Lynda C

	2	lissanne Apparently there's even more to it in human speech vis-a-vis babies. A study of women addressing babies and pets showed that in both cases the woman's voice was of a higher pitch. However, there was a difference: when addressing babies, the women tended to stretch vowels, enunciate (interpreted as an attempt to teach speech), this stretching did not occur when addressing a pet. So I decided to 'watch' for this difference in myself, speaking to a baby or to a pet. I'll be darned - I was doing it too! That leaves me more than just a bit confused, I am sorry to say. What is society to think by reading/hearing nationalist tinged jokes about suicide and murder?

And I second Becky's question of concern. Seems there is something out of sorts with some of the defensive posts today.

I am leaving for a bit, but I have a blonde joke for Elliott, and I think TigerMOD, James, and Kathryn might enjoy it too! This would happen to me if I were to go parachuting:

On the first day of training for parachute jumping, a blonde listened intently to the instructor. He told them to start preparing for landing when they are at 300 feet. The blonde asked, "How am I supposed to know when I'm at 300 feet?""That's a good question. When you get to 300 feet, you can recognize the faces of people on the ground. "After pondering his answer, she asked, "What happens if there's no one there I know?"

6/27/2010

I have not done a PDF since yesterday. Given the nature of some conversations today, it might be a good time to bring to a close the documenting of the dialog. We've strayed pretty far from Mollywood.  ${\textcircled{\buildrel }}$

You can put some photos on the wiki page itself, but you must resize them to the proper size before uploading them. There really isn't a good tool for displaying many photos on the pages. (One reason I haven't changed the photo page I put up.) You can however store the images and video on another site and link to them. Many sites, Flickr and YouTube included, have embeddable widgets for gallery, slideshows, and videos that can be embedded in a Wiki page.

Lucky, I think you were being funny but, You can not see all pictures of someone just because they are on Facebook. And it really is a very bad practice to post other people's private photos without/against their consent. It should never even be questioned when/if you are asked to remove them. That's just plain common sense and courtesy. Some people have very good reason to keep their person/private/business/and online personae completely separate.

Mary Carroll (the Shadow) Me too. I thought a picture on the internet is like a picture in the newspaper. Today, 17:35:34 - Flag - Like - Reply

Copyright law states that you can't post/copy or reproduce a picture found in the newspaper either. Someone owns that picture and/or text and has a right to determine how it's use and where it's posted and/or printed.

Rule of thumb..... if you didn't write it, or didn't take the picture your self, or didn't draw it....don't repost it. Instead post a link to the writing and/or picture, so that people can go to the link where the original is posted. Today, 17:44:24 - Flag - Unlike - Reply

James - you are so right!!!! Many of us know a lot about others on this site, more than they may realize, but we keep our mouth shut because if someone wants to remain anonymous they must have a good reason for it. The son of a friend of mine testified in a drug trial, moved and kept a low profile until someone outed him (long story how & where). He had to move again because his life had been put in danger. When I saw Elliot's photo posted by Mary Carroll, I knew right away that it was going to be a huge issue here and for GOOD REASON I might add. I knew it was wrong for one person to post a photo of another without the person ever knowing they had gotten a copy of the photo in the first place much less not gotten the consent to post it in a very public place like this chat room. James is SO very correct in what he has said here. Many people have to keep themselves as private as they can for a variety of reasons, myself being one. To be continued in Part 2 below: Today, 19:23:08 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 👤 cj in fl

AZGuest Part 2: By this happening today, it is very possible that it will have caused many to "re-think" about being involved in this chat room or any others in the future. I, myself, was very hesitant in ever posting here during the M&M viewing for this very reason. We must all THINK before we do anything else here or anywhere else on the Internet. Hopefully this will be a lesson to any and all that read this in the basement and otherwise! There is a reason why many of us have not used our photo as our avatar photo and chat room peeps need to respect that IMO. When I saw Elliot's photo posted, I had to walk away as I as not too happy seeing that. I knew it was going to be a problem & I was obviously right! To be continued below since I cannot post it all in one post here...

Today, 19:30:11 - Flag - Like - Reply

AZGuest Part 3: If that would have happened to me, I would have reacted the same way. No one has the right to post anything that they do not have the consent for. James is VERY correct in his comment about people needing or requiring to keep themselves as private as possible. Like I said I was really hesitant to even make any posts during the M&M watching but everyone seemed to just be here for that purpose & with that over with now, everyone pretty much stuck around with the thought that the generalized chat would continue and not a private investigation using FB & other sources to find out what a person looks like.

Today, 19:36:10 - Flag - Like - Reply

AZGuest Part 4: Lastly, if people want their photo posted here or elsewhere that is their choice to post it & not someone else to be doing it for them. I don't get the FASCINATION with a person wanting to know what another chat room peep looks like. Is it or was it really that important in the first place or to know how old a chat room peep is? Let's get back to basics here or the room will empty out and really quickly! I am not taking sides, but because of my background I knew the posting of Elliot's photo and then asking him publicly in a chat room if that was him, was totally wrong in the first place. You never know who the people are or what their profession is who are here and elsewhere on the Internet and I am always on the side of caution myself... Just some advice I am throwing out.

My first ever experience with a shotgun, when I was just a little tiny guy, was pretty traumatic. I was with some "friends" and the dad handed me his 12 gauge double barrel. No warnings, no instructions, just handed me the monster and loaded one shell. Pointed me at the target and said let'er rip. I ended up flat on my back with a bruised shoulder and ego. We woke very early the next morning to go duck hunting, right after a very rare overnight snowfall in SC. On arrival at the lake, the dad slipped on the slush covered boat ramp and went sliding into the lake up past his wader tops. Karma has 😇 😀 been a big part of my beliefs ever since. Today, 16:20:10 - Like - Reply - Delete

Yes, what comes around goes around. I have seen it many times. Glad you weren't hurt any worse with the gun. I would target practice many times with my dad, and had fun with his little pistol. It was mostly innocent. I'm sure I would have laughed had I not been the one on my butt. 🙂

In my early twenties I went with some friends to an indoor firing range to adjust, or sight-in, my new 30-06 rifle. The place was packed with folks firing pistols. I was sent to the far lane at the end of the range to fire my rifle. It was the only trap they had for high powered rifles. Even wearing hearing protection, it was quite a surprise to hear (and feel) the shock-wave of a large cal. rifle going off in an enclosed space, amid all the pop, pop, pop of the small handguns. After the first shot I looked out from behind the divider and saw all eyes turned my way. I guess everyone was as stunned as I was. Almost forgot the best part.... As an act of extreme twisted kindness, my best friend decided to shoot at my target from his own lane next door. His holes in the target made my adjustments on my poorly aligned scope a practice of pure frustration. He was only a couple shots away from making a complete Smiley face before I realized what was going on. I had in fact missed the target completely with all but 1 or 2 shots. Doh! 🐸 Today, 17:16:30 - Like - Reply - Delete

Lynda, I never write recipes down. I usually look for something interesting online and then loosely follow their directions. I make many substitutions and changes depending on my mood. It's something I think I inherited from my great grandmother, who also just threw things together. Wonderful things, mind you. It must skip a couple generations because my mom relies heavily on recipes, I hate doing so. Plus it's always a surprise, even to me, with how things turn out.

The steakhouse bread recipe I started with was just a simple wheat and honey bread, with instant (yuck) coffee and some coco. I used dark espresso grind and subbed molasses for the honey. I like dark chewy breads and love black-strap molasses. I may have added cinnamon too, since I usually do.

You are uploading the full size image files.

You will need to reduce their size (pixel dimensions) with an editing program to change how they appear when opened here. Just don't change the original files, else you'll lose valuable info forever. Use a simple editor to make a smaller copy to upload. Most of them use the term Resize or Resample for the tool to reduce image dimensions. Today, 15:36:59 - Like - Reply - Delete

It depends on the browser people are using. On most current browsers the large images open just large enough to fill the screen. Then clicking on the image enlarges it to the actual size you uploaded. If you were uploading smaller copies then they would only open as large as what you uploaded.

It is best to shoot the images as large as your camera will allow, that way you can always make prints from the files. For message boards and chat, the usual size restrictions require one to upload smaller copies. That takes up less server storage space and loads faster for people clicking on them. I guess the js-kit software doesn't enforce small-ish image sizes. I uploaded a couple the other day that I was surprised by too. I meant to upload much smaller copies.

Tigermo, I think it was you who asked if my grandfather smoked Tip O'Neill's cigar. He told me he did smoke it and if he didn't, I don't know why he would lie to me, then either my dad or my uncle smoked it when my grandfather had to quit per doctor's orders (heart attack).

She gave me one of my first Cocker that died in 1998 for Christmas a few years after she died. It could have been any cocker in the world, but I knew it was Shadow when I opened the picture up. Not really. Came in from the all-volunteer garden with some nice zucchinis earlier. Thinking of roasting them in some fattening butter and garlic. Will side it with a nice big cool and crisp salad, with all the required meat and dairy trimmings.

Also looking at plans online for a solar oven. I've been wanting to make one for some time. I'd like to be able to bake some of my hearty wheat bread outside. I really miss having fresh bread when it's too hot to fire up the oven.

I've read so many mixed reviews of cookers for sale that I've decided to make my own. I'm looking at the box-type cookers for more even heating and higher sustained temps. There are some great plans here: http://solarcooking.org/plans/ The Cob Solar Oven listed on that page is something I may use for inspiration. I don't want a permanent structure, but I do like the size and mass of something like that. I thinking of converting a discarded gas grill, plenty of those around this time of year. Seems some people would rather buy a new behemoth rather than service and repair their "old" ones.

Have posted these before when I told the tale of mother robin hitting our window and leaving the muddy imprint. All is still well, she recovered nicely, finished her nest and is now sitting on her eggs. Her nest is in the top of the snowball bush. But, what I didn't realize until a couple of days ago was that a field sparrow also has a nest in the same bush !! The sparrow's nestro more than 3 feet from the robin's nest and hidden in a lower branch to the right and she is busy feeding a few hungry little ones. There seems to be no rivalry or concern between the 2 mothers at all and the sparrows will have fledged by the time the robin's eggs hatch. Sorry, no photos, they are too well hidden and I won't disturb them.

Kristi from VA I love it. This reminds me. Last school year, I put cling-ons of flowers on my window at school. My only little teeny window sits on the courtyard next to a small tree. Apparently, there was a robin out there with some type of interesting tendencies. Anyway, I kept hearing this tapping. I looked all over the place, couldn't find it. Anyway, I found out one day. The kids told me. Oh, that's Herbie. I said, WHAT? Herbie. He's the bird that likes the flowers. He keeps pecking on the flowers. I went to the window and there was all this bird spit on the window. He had been hitting the window repeatedly trying to get at the flowers was all I could figure. Well, I took the flowers down, and then I closed my blinds, but still peck, peck, peck. (I was also appalled that my students had named him rather than telling me.)

Kristi from VA So, I went out to the courtyard and shooed him. Kept teaching, then TAP, TAP, TAP. It was like an Edgar Allan Poe novel. So I got someone to watch my kids. I took my cricket shooing broom out there and put it on the window and it came up about 4 inches on the window. I then proceeded to go to the janitor's closet and got the big long sweepy broom and I put it up on the window, broom side up. My theory was that little Herbie would be scared and go away. I then shut the blinds. Who can listen to me teach when there is a broom outside? I saw my principal and I told him that he could just thank me for doing my own maintenance. I knew he was busy since it was Kindergarten Orientation day. He just smirked - people's usual reaction to me. All was well until ....

Kristi from VA after lunch. I heard tap, tap, tap, tap. I opened the blinds. THE BROOM WAS GONE. I went to the cafeteria. I saw the substitute janitor. He was sweeping with the broom. See, it was after lunchtime. I said, What are you doing? He said, Sweeping. I said, no, no, no. I am trying to save Herbie. He is going to suffer brain damage if he continues to hit into my window. I'm going to need the broom back. And you know what? He decided not to mess with me. I can be quite formidable at times. Either that or he thought I was a crazy woman and figured he better not mess with me. SO ... on Monday the normal janitor came back. He let me keep the broom there for days. I said the broom wasn't going until I was sure Herbie got the message becuase I simply could not handle the death of Herbie. He just nodded. Haven't seen Herbie since. The End. 🙂 Today, 14:13:53 - Flag - Like - Reply

My first job was as a statistical typist in Kansas City when I was 16. It was just for the summer and my mother went with me on the interview. Kristi from VA You know, I tell all my students that they have to learn how to count money. They whine and cry that the computers will do it for them. However, we talk about them inputting the wrong digits, electricity being out, etc. It truly is a lost art. About a month ago, I had to buy a present and the cashier inputted the wrong amount and had no idea how much change to give me. I am thinking "UH-HUH this is a PRIME example." I was licking my chops, just waiting to tell my "kids." So I told the cashier how much to give me. I walked to the car and realized that I shorted myself a buck. That's what I get for being an arrogant little son of a gun. Today, 13:08:26 - Flag - Like - Repl

Mollie, a big part of the unflattering appearance of the TA owls is due to how the IR camera and light make them look. This is a big space with a tiny little IR light aimed directly at them from the same POV as the camera. It produces a flat-light effect which no one looks good in. Think of a nighttime snapshot taken with a small point and shoot camera. Or, better yet, search for some night-vision (IR) video of people on the web. The people in those videos look pretty disfigured also. When there is sufficient light coming in from all angles, the owls look much more normal. Molly's box was so small that the light had a chance to bounce off the very near and reflective walls. They also had two light sources, one in front and one above, much like a studio portrait photographer would use.

Word got around and I was soon in demand all over my town and beyond. Almost every night I had a babysitting job, and weekends were especially busy, day and night. I got so busy that I finally got my older sister on board, and soon we were both overloaded! I started doing this in 1957 and I continued being busy with it until I graduated high school. God morning everyone, just checked in and saw the video Kathleen posted last night. What fun! wish I could of been there too. Really enjoyed hearing the Molly song again too. Hope Carlos and Donna have been alerted where to watch it as I think they will be so happy to see what has come of all the hard work they did and how many people have now become friends due to the Molly box.

Lynda C I really enjoyed the "Molly Song" that time !!! Weren't Kathleen and tigermo a "HOOT" ??? And Chris, in her avatar colors, standing on one leg in "the owl pose" ??

Someone had suggested the Central Park Zoo. Perhaps that was premised on us already being in Central Park. The Zoo is wonderful. It is small and beautifully laid out. It is not at all a mega municipal zoo like the Bronx Zoo, or any of the big zoos you may have available to you (as do we).

I am open to anything you folks wish to do. This is my City and I can do it all anytime I like, so I'd rather do what you visitors would like to do. Today, 09:59:31 – Flag – Like – Reply Liked by Natalie Cheryl Owen

There are some dumb questions but we never took those and got cranky about it. No point in that--just have to laugh. The unreasonable questions like which one do you love more HAVE to have some sort of story behind them. Just a completely off-the-wall question like the goofy ones we joke about (the "are you still beating your wife?" kind) make you go "WHAT?'

My next closest cousin is 6 mo younger than I and we would get the "sister" questions on occassion when we would get together. It probably didn't help that my mother made us matching dresses!

Dh, yes, Elliott - and it was all my mother's fault! She loved storms and instilled in us a craving for them. So when a storm was forecast and it didn't appear, she would repeat that stupid saying to us and we were thoroughly disgusted. Soon after I got married, a thunderstorm appeared out of nowhere and I ran around opening all the windows in our apartment -- and my poor husband rand around behind me shutting them after me! It was a bit of a tug-of-war for a while, but he finally gave up. Today, 08:56:42 - Flag - Like - Rep

Mary Carroll (the Shadow) I found a similar recipe on the internet. Cupcake Ingredients: 1 (18.25-ounce) package butter recipe white cake mix 1 cups water one half cup butter softened 3 egg whites 1 teaspoon almond flavoring 1 cup sweetened flaked coconut Frosting Ingredients: 3 cups powdered sugar 1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese, softened one fourth cup butter, softened 1 tablespoon milk Decorations Ingredients: 48 butter rum-flavored hard candies with holes milk chocolate or semi-sweet chocolate chips one half cup sliced almonds 24 whole cashews

Today, 10:00:40 – Flag – Like – Reply

Mary Carroll (the Shadow) Heat oven to 350°F. Combine all cake ingredients except coconut in large bowl. Beat according to package directions. Gently stir in coconut. Fill paperlined muffin cups two-thirds full. Bake for 19 to 22 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool completely. Combine all frosting ingredients in medium bowl. Beat at medium speed, scraping bowl often, until creamy. Frost cooled cupcakes. Place 2 butter rum candies on each cupcake for eyes. Dip bottoms of chocolate chips into frosting; place onto each candy circle to form center of eye. Arrange almonds above eyes for feathers. Add cashew for beak. Today, 10:09:28 - Flag - Like - Reply

Hope you have a lovely day. Hot hot hot again it seems. (my water butt is empty...aaaaargh!) Had some disturbing feedback from a fellow twitcher last week about the andover or was it the ringwood sanctuary...my memory is failing me this am. They were fined and closed for a while apparantly for ill treatment. Think it's sorted now though.... hope so. Didn't quite make it that far and only had 2 nights away from home so couldn't check them out for mvself.

I hadn't heard that about one of the centres being shut down and fined - thats worrying, will try and find out which one it was. It doesn't look like your water butt is going to be filled any time soon either looking at the forecast - I know we shouldn't complain really - but it is a bit too hot at the moment - and dry! I just had the most wonderful day. I went to the zoo and got to meet some fellow Molly Fans. The sun came out, we bonded, laughed, watched the raptor demonstration in which the brought out the Barn Owl especially for us thanks to Boid. Came home, napped, hubby made a nice dinner, then helped me edit the SEATTLE MOD SQUAD ZOO VIDEO http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RMj1rdtaENg, post in on YouTube so we could all see it. Lynda C I'm not in favor of "genetically" altered animals, fish or birds. Those fish ae going to breed with the natural fish and the gene pool will never be the same again. They aren't going to taste a it better (probably less taste). All that is supposed to happen is they grow bigger, faster. What happens 10 or 20 years down the road when they discover that they "goofed" ?? Today, 01:27:02 - Flag - Like - Reply

I agree. Our government (non-political) has a really bad habit of making decisions based more on economics than other factors. Today, 01:32:37 - Flag - Like - Reply

Example C I Googled it and read the whole article and I red a little more about it. It might sound good "they will only be raised in fish farm tanks and not allowed to go into the wild" - "they will only raise sterile females" ???? 	Barbara sooooo lucky here sales assistant in music shop. Got fantastic discount - they probably got all my wages back come to think of it as I saved up and bought a flute when I left - it was in the sale and by the time we'd shuffled about with an extra 10% plus staff discount and rounding down - well I was well pleased! My record collection was boosted too those were the days lol can remember selling 8track cassettes too for cars (the size of videos!) whatever happened to them? I then got married after leaving college and the boss came to the wedding with a VERY generous present of silver tray and crystal glasses. The shop still exists but has changed somewhat! I'm pretty sure she bui egg. I was so sad, so I used floral wire and a bungee cord to reattach it in the tree. My neighbors thought I had lost my mind. I'm pretty sure she built another nest nearby.

Well it's that time again just as the par-tay gets started, pout! Need to watch the movie because it is a kid's movie and my daughter has to get to bed at a decent hour, even though it is summer time.

BUT, before I go, she told me a funny story. She went boating with a friend for a couple of hours this afternoon (after I found out the dojo picnic is tomorrow.) I digress. Anyways, she said they went to the grocery store first, and a lady got out of her car next to them in purple and yellow striped pants, with a rainbow polka-dotted shirt, and was carrying a stuffed elephant under her arms, and when she went to walk into the store she started walking like chicken !!!!

She was laughing so hard telling me the story she could hardly get it out! I swear you cannot make this stuff up! Yesterday, 23:39:54 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 💽 CAR 🎆 Christina Sigvertsen Podvin 🐺 Merritt 📠 Sherry Vann 🎆 Meta Davidson 👤 Guest

You guys...i'm so upset. when i took the dogs out, i noticed our hanging basket had fallen down. 2 of the babies had fallen out. guess the basket with all the water got too heavy. i put the babies back, one was still in the nest. We hung the basket by a tree near the porch. will mom come back??? i am a mess. to watch the parents work so hard and now this. Yesterday, 23:36:48 - Flag - Like - Reply

Tip I'd like to think mom is over w/ her friends, sniffling, and she describes what happened, then asks, "Do you think the human will re-hang the basket?" Maybe she'll be back to check! Yesterday, 23:39:53 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🐺 Merritt

It's likely that she will if the basket is nearby where it had been. She will hear her little ones. She might be a little confused at first. Hope all turns out OK.

Anyone like James Brown back in the day? (He did a show at William and Mary when I was there...he was probably high as a kite, but it was a terrific show!) Anyway, this clip of Eddie Murphy imitating James Brown is one of the funniest things I've ever seen:

Hi, Natalie. I'm lurking to see pics from today's gathering in Seattle but have to comment on your post. It's funny to me that you saw James Brown at your college, because I saw Eddie Murphy when he came to my college! Enjoyed your clip. I loved when Eddie imitated James Brown in the "Hot Tub" skit on SNL. That was LOL funny!

I just tuned into the Tel-Aviv owls! Such ruckus!! Mom or Dad stopped in with a treat. One baby got it. Then the parent moved back to the far corner and came back with another mouse or something. The one with the full mouth went running over and tried to grab that mouse too! Then another little one pushed its way in and tried to get it, but Momor Dad decided they wanted that mouse for themself, and were in the process of swallowing it whole. It was half way consumed when the pushy little baby snatched it out of its parent's mouth! LOL

The girls played (and won) 4 softball games in 7 hours amidst sweltering heat and brutal sun. They went undefeated for the season, so it was only fitting they finished today's tournament the same way. I've now been once over 500+ images and I can't keep my eyes open any more. I'll check in with you all tomorrow, after editing down my photos to a more manageable level.

Marla....Oh yes.....I just have a little Casio Camera (although I did make my dance video with it) but tigermo had a super camera and was taking a gazillion pictures like a professional...so I sorta relaxed and enjoyed the company and the day. I did shoot some video of us doing the MOLLY SONG (well, sorta) but it will take some time to edit it since I had to leave the camera running the whole time we were setting up. I am anxious to see the other photos. I feel sorry for those who had to drive a long way home as the I-5 was backed up for miles as I drove over it and Hwy 99 was shut down for repairs going south. lynn Hi, owl friends! I haven't been on here much today..we went to a garden festival/garden walk, on a farm. It was very pretty there. They had crafts, garden ornaments, food, music, etc. We bought some yellow/orange begonias, pink ones, and some yellow flowers (can't remember what they are!). Oh, and I bought some dragonfly earrings. They had some very cute owl crafts, but I was looking for barn owls, not great horned owls!! Hope y'owls had a nice day...looks like the Seattle get-together was fun! We're going to get something to eat, I'll check in tonight. Did I read that we can't watch the Dutch owls any longer? Dragonfly with compound eyes. Author: David L. Green

A compound eye is a visual organ found in certain arthropods. The compound eye consists of between 12 and 1,000 ommatidia, little dark/bright sensors. The image perceived by the arthropod is "recalculated" from the numerous ommatidia which point in slightly different directions. In contrast to other eye types, there is no central lens or retina. Though the resulting image is poor in resolution, it can detect quick movements and, in some cases, the polarization of light. Dragonflies have about 30,000 facets to their compound eyes, giving them nearly a 360° field of vision.

~~i had no idea about the 360 degrees! Yesterday, 20:32:13 - Flag - Like - Reply

Anyone keeping up with the Tel Aviv owls? Did they lose one? I'm only seeing 4 now. I thought there were 5. They sure are skinny. Looks like food might now be as plentiful in the area of this owl box. http://video.tau .ac.il/General/birds/2010/

They have the freedom to roam about the place. there was only one in the box earlier. I believe their nest is inside an actual barn, and it's not just a box outside. They are also a different species of barn owl, so they look different than the ones from San Marcos. They evolved in a much warmer climate. Finally, they have been eating quite a lot actually, and they've been very active. I think they are fine. Yesterday, 18:46:13 - Like - Reply - Delete

Ok, that explains a lot. I was wondering if they were a different type of barn owl, because they look taller and slimmer. I kept seeing them hop outside of this area and wondered where they were going. Thanks for the info!

I'm seriously doing everything I can to get there, and do plan on it - but I'm still awaiting the timing issues with the sale of the Coop - as you know, the Board can keep you waiting until the last minute, and the "deadline" for closing is August 1st. So if the Coop is sold, I'm planning on just staying in a hotel that weekend - unless we have to close on a new house then, as well. But since that sale went up in smoke yesterday - I really don't know WHAT is going on - but I REALLY want to be there! I'll keep you posted!

It's been there forever, and if my memory serves me correctly, they have good food - nothing special, but it's good, and the view out over the lake is really pretty. I don't think you can imagine how disgusting the heat can get in Manhattan when it goes into the 90s (F don't know what that is in C). All that heat-generating traffic and concrete -UGH!

It seems the steenuils are spending most of their time in the doorway to their nest, even during daylight hours. I checked several websites and it seems they are partially diurnal. Johan's reports do not seem to refer to them fledging just yet, but they are clearly fascinated by the world outside their box.

I wish I could have stayed up for it!! appeared on television - He used to only live up the road from it and the BBC crews used to come and get stuff from us! Never did meet Alan himself, but was quite friendly with Bob his gardener !!! I also was an extra on the John Cleese film 'Fierce Creatures' or whatever it was called - it was filmed at our local zoo - sadly though they changed the ending of the film so the bit I was in with my kids was never shown!!! My friends groan when I start with jokes...just love stories and jokes... Here's another rabbit story

There were three rabbits, ffft, ftft, and ftftft... One day ffft got sick and ftft and ftftft called the doctor.. The doctor came and said ffft would be better in the morning... but ffft died... Later, ftft got sick and ftftft called the doctor... The doctor came and said ftft would be better in the morning... Ftftft said he better be...because...

We already have one Ffft in the grave!!! Yesterday, 10:48:34 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🚈 Natalie 🌃 Jan (Bayonne, NJ)

I remember that. As usual, I was reading the chat ex post facto. And Elliott would know a musical genius when he hears one. Stevie Ray was one of the giants. Who knows what he would be doing now if he hadn't died.

But I think Elliott would agree that his tastes lie mostly in the classical direction. I'm hoping he'll give me a tutorial in Chopin. Yesterday, 10:27:49 - Flag - Like - Reply Liked by 🚈 Natalie 🌃 Jan (Bayonne, NJ)

It's interesting how we can be wired to respond to different genres of sounds. I'm sure the psycho/neuromusicologists have it all figured out. I just haven't been inclined to go figure it out. I can't listen to symphonies. There's just too many sounds coming at me and I get sensory overload. Sometimes even a chamber orchestra is too much.

A lot of our tastes probably have to do with musical education. The classical music that I was exposed to and taught as a child I like now as an adult, and those symphonies don't even overload me. Yesterday, 10:35:18 - Flag - Like - Reply

I love symphonies! The problem for me is that when I listen to them, that's all I can do. I can't listen to them as background to, say, housework, because they demand my entire concentration. My mother used to love listening to Mozart while she did housework. She once made me a cassette (this was back in the late '70s) of selected Mozart pieces, and she called the tape Mozart to do Housework By. But it didn't work for me! According to US Strategic Command, reentry should occur on June 27th at 0213 UT +/- 16 hours. The large uncertainty in decay time makes it impossible to say exactly where the fireball will appear.

Looks like I missed all kinds of interesting discussions yesterday and last night, including an 'opportunity' to speak with The Pittster himself! LOL

During college in the 70s I was part of the group that booked entertainment for the university AND I had the biggest car, so it was always my task to pick up the bands at the airport. The list is pretty long but I will say the most fun group EVER was ZZ Top. Those guys really knew how to party. (Snootiest? Spiro Gyra. But that is NOT why we dropped a light tree on their piano. It was an accident, I swear!) Then, in the 80's and 90's I lived in Baltimore and worked with our lobbying group down in DC quite a bit, so I have a good sized list of politicians too. We won't talk about whether they were fun or not! Hollywood type celebs... nope, none.

K8orlando (It's ME: Owlosaurus!) Thinking some more about it, the most interesting person I ever met probably was quite a celebrity in some circles. I'm sad to say I don't even remember his name but I do remember his stories. It was in 1986 or 87 and I was working as a safety engineer for an insurance company. One of our accounts was Flying Tiger Airlines and I was lucky enough to be the one doing on-site surveys of their cargo facilities. In Cincinnati during one visit the mgmt team and the pilots were all excited about a visitor - never one to pass up a chance for a drink and good stories I joined them after work at a local bar. Their visitor, Jim I think, was an older pilot who had been flying with Flying Tigers for decades. He told heroic and wildly funny stories about 'just in the nick of time' escapes from danger in Cuba and China that had us all on the edge of our bar stools for hours.

I remembered another famous person that I know, or at least was from my hometown and his family were across-the-street neighbors to us and my dad knows him and I have met him: Admiral Robert Shumaker, USN (ret). He's a Veitnam war hero. He is, unfortunately, famous for having gone through some horrible conditions. Well, unfortunate that he had to go through that but fortunate in that he survived.
