Notice how Molly stopped making that sound when McGee took off? I think she's hungry and was trying to tell him to get her something to eat. I hope he finds her a nice juicy rabbit!

 Good to see you too Kathryn 😊 Its a shame you've got to limit your online watching - but I can sympathise as I had no idea how much bandwidth this took up until I also got a bill for excess usage a few months ago! fortunately I had the option to upgrade my package - I seriously need to not spend quite as much time here as I had been though!!

 Unfortunately, we only have one high-speed internet provider in my town, and they do not offer an "unlimited" package, so I am limited, even if I upgrade to the highest one available. 😊

Has McGee been feeding Molly well? Her stomach seemed so much larger last time. Earlier today I saw her take a delivery...it looked like the tale end of a mouse! First go-round McGee was feeding her like crazy. Maybe that's her right now...telling McGee...I'm hungry! No treat?

McGee came to 'visit'. I didn't see him bring any food. He stayed on the perch right outside the door for a while. Then Molly came out and flew off for a few minutes. She has been in the box, and no McGee, until she just now left and came back. I have been in and out watching tonight, so I might have missed something. Hope this answers your question!

I just remembered to make sure that they were all in... I don't want them to end up being dinner in an Owl Box somewhere!!!! I lost 3 cats a few years back to a Great Horned Owl... I worked at a landfill and rescued to many... couldn't leave them there.

It does look that way. One already fell off a few days ago and had to be put back. They are all accidents looking for a place to happen. At least two of us have sent an email to Barn Owl Trust to let them know, but it will be morning in the UK before they get their email. We can only hope for the best. Have you seen the daily diary from that site <http://www.barnowltrust.org.uk/infopage.html?id=254>. It's under About Our Webcams on the left side menu.

Carlos cleaned out about 10 lbs. of "gag shag" when he renovated the owl box. He was looking for Dudley (the egg that never hatched), but didn't find it. He said the "stuff" smelled pretty bad. He has also reported that Molly cleaned some more out when she came back to nest. A good place to keep up with updates or to review past photos and announcements is Molly's blog <http://mollysbox.wordpress.com/blog/> Another good place to see past history, resources, poems, slide shows, etc. is the wiki which was set up and managed by some volunteers from this chat room <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com/>

Good evening... I am back! I live in the woods and don't get garbage pick up, so I loaded my trailer and tried to go to the dump... I use to work for the landfill...so I enjoy going there. I was the first girl ever to weld in their shop. Due to money cuts... I had to go to 3 transfer stations to find the one open. I bet I had to drive 40+ miles... grrrr. I have to move furniture tomorrow... so the garbage had to go. I am happy to be home to see Molly!

Ok, I sat my hubby and 3 boys down and said I had something to tell them. They saw me come into the room with camera in hand and started to freak out a bit (same room, camera in hand, baby announcement to them-yr. 1/2 ago). I sat down and was coy for a bit. When they heard the Molly "announcement" instead, all was well for me. Reactions were varied but I'll tell you that someone's going to get severe punishment around here if they try to govern my minutes spent as threatened!!

DH is hugging 50 and the baby thing was brought up earlier by strange coincidence. It set the perfect scene!

Also, I was watching the Barn Owl Trust Cam in the U.K and all three owlets hopped up to the tray. It got so crowded that one of them fell off. Hopefully they can find it on the floor of the barn in the morning. I sent an email.

There seems to be some technical difficulty with the inside view right now, Mari. Several people here reported seeing the owlet fall off the tray on the Barn Owl Trust site. This isnt the first time it has happened. Those little guys are too advenureous for their own good. I emailed them also, but it is doubtful anyone will get the emails until morning in the UK.

BTW: I was at a Hallmark store this weekend and my daughter was playing with all the stuffed animals there. She found a few owls and brought them to me. TY has a barn owl and owlet (sold separately) that are really cute! They also have a mama and baby screech owl that are pretty cute too. If anyone watched the one screech owl on here, the stuffed one is an exact replica of that little guy. I had to resist buying them all. 😊

I live in a very nice, well kept neighborhood. Everyone here has bird feeders. Most people (like myself) have more than one feeder. About a week ago, I saw a rat in the yard. When my husband called an exterminator, he told us that everyone in the entire neighborhood must get rid of our bird feeders. He said when you feed birds, you are also feeding rats. Does anyone have any ideas on how I can feed birds without getting any on the ground for the rats?

It was kind of a joke, Patty G., but....if you're lucky enough to get owls nesting in your box, they could keep the rat population down. Worth a try. Other birds WILL continue to come around if you have an owl box and/or owls. Just look at the Royal's yard.

Sorry, Patty, I can't help. Our biggest problem critters at feeders here in rural Maine are squirrels (especially red squirrels), raccoons and bear. After live trapping (and relocating them 5 miles away) 12 or 13 raccoons that had been raiding and destroying my bird feeders 2 summers ago I have opted not to feed many song birds any more. I had one small finch feeder up, but the raccoons were able to tear it down and destroy it this week. I still feed the hummingbirds, but have noticed that the raccoons are climbing the small diameter, steel shepherd hook post and emptying them, too. I've ha no trouble with bears here, but others have and the game wardens always tell them to take their feeders down.

Patty G...I don't have any answers, I wish I did. I have 2 suet feeders, and have seen one forest rat. I buy these things called Mouse Magic. They are like sachets, but with peppermint and spearmint oil in them. I have them all over my house, and they keep the mice away. I put one outside under the suet basket, and have not seen a forest rat or mouse since.

Hi Patty, I guess a rat is a rat, but when we lived in our previous house we had wood rats. It was a nice suburban area with lots of trees, some wooded areas. I have heard it said many times if you feed the birds you are feeding the other wildlife as well. Technically the exterminator is right, but I just don't think people are going to stop feeding the birds. Some people advocate only feeding them in the winter when the natural food supply is low so as not to attract other unwanted wildlife.

That is the tough part. You have to scroll down into the basement. So you go to the bottom of the screen and click on the word "More". You can keep doing that and go back quite a few hours. But eventually your computer will hang and you can't go back anymore. That is why the last time around we made PDFs or copies of the chat and posted them offsite on the internet so folks could go back and read prior chat. It is a lot of work and I'm not sure anyone will do it this time. So the best choice is to come back and scroll down. Hope that helps.

Scroll down, click more. Rinse and repeat...a lot. Depending how long ago you asked, it may well be impossible to reach it. Unfortunately there is no ability to see replies to your posts without signing up for the email notifications or digging through the basement. Look in the Admin options to the right to set up email notifications, if you like.

Today, 20:02:54 - Flag - Like - ReplyJH (dog tired and covered in kitty hair)

Chris it is almost useless to use the email updates here. Either you get everything! Or almost nothing. I am subscribed to receive replies to my own comments. Problem is, no one pays attention to what they are replying to and often they will just click reply to the last post in a thread. That means you likely never see most of the replies in an email.

Last night and this morning, some posters were not convinced that the owl in the box is, in fact, Molly, but perhaps an imposter. I went through my pictures and found some shots that are similar in pose, or facial expression.

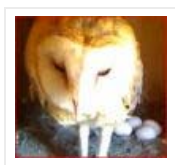

A barn owl, is a barn owl, is a barn owl, right? Not if you are familiar with a certain barn owl. All the babies were barn owls, but each had it's individual differences, nuances, way of getting out of the nest, etc.

I really believe the owl in the box is OUR MOLLY!!

This is what happened the last time an owlet fell out in Cornwall.

July 14th - overnight one of the owlets that had managed to get out of the nestbox was accidentally bumped by one of the returning adults and fell from the tray to the floor of the barn. This morning, it was found and boxed up. It has now been returned to the nestbox and has settled back down with its siblings. Thank you to everyone who called and emailed us with your concerns.

Don't know if anyone wants to email. It's England, so baby will be on its own for a while.

Gosh, I thought I just got busted. I heard noise at the front door, thought it was a key turning in the lock! Turns out it was my dog Hannah scratching at the door. We had just given her another bath in her special shampoo in the backyard and left her out there to dry. I guess the back gate came open and she came to the front to be let in! 😊

Molly looks like she's rearranging a bit, restless or another egg, or is it too late? I need to think of some good egg names!

No they have not left as they are in and out of the nesting area especially when they get food. I think they are in a real barn and probably play around there. The oldest has not been sleeping in nesting area for about a week so guess he is in tree during day. You can still hear them in the background even if you don't see them. Around 5:30 Tel Aviv time they come together in nesting area but don't know how long.

Hi My Favorite Peeps! I'm on hubby's laptop and for some reason can't log in to my yahoo account here... He has left for the store with our daughter for about a half hour, that's all I get with you for now until after dinner. I just made it quick and painless and told him about Round Two when I got home from work, and he took it well enough but made it clear it cannot be like the last time, we have many projects to do this summer, plus he's worried about our cable bill. So I didn't want to haul out my laptop until later so he doesn't freak out when he gets home. I can hear him drive up from where I am at, so can quickly escape, LOL! 😊

That's OK. I will survive, LOL! Luv's all of you, and Molly, you sure are looking pretty tonight! 😊😊😊

I have an idea, albeit not a very good one - Why doesn't Carlos have a naming contest ? He could ask for $1.00 for each name submitted to go toward Austin's college fund. I know that's a bit "catty" and I mean no disrespect for Carlos.

I began a journey into the basement, but it's never ending today. Think I'll pass on trying to find where I left off.

Has there been any talk out of CR today? Did Molly lay another egg? Will the bright RED R on the landing pad keep Mcgee away?

Vexing questions from the neighbor's 3 cats. They bum-rushed me at the door, as they've been without updates since Sat.

I guess even my company is better than being stuck with a cranky old bird all day.

(note, there really is an old parrot, I am not referring to my vacationing neighbor lady)

 Colleen, I'm sure you and I could enjoy a rewarding discussion on the topic. But I am reluctant to venture there in what should be an apolitical forum, other than to say that many, if not most, of my heroes are women, particularly women who were ahead of their times, and incurred society's ridicule, if not its physical wrath. Merritt reminded us earlier today of Sojourner Truth, whose story should be read to every American child as part of their education.

 Is Bolty really there the way it was any more. There was some discussion - maybe a Carlos update - about him reversing Bolty so that it didn't stick out so far on the inside 😊😊

 Just repeatin' what I think I heard and I think directly from Carlos. There was all sorts of worry (maybe even some from the BOA) that an owl might poke an eye out on it. I actually thought the owls liked it - a scratching post, a beak sharpening gadget, etc.

Since the weather is now warmer than when the first clutch hatched, can Molly spend a little less time sitting on these eggs and get out to catch a cooler breeze from time to time?

Carlos said the eggs need to be at 91 degrees to incubate. So she can hop off for a while and they won't cool down as fast as before, but then needs to lay on them for a while.

Hi. My name is Christina and I thought I was on the right path to recovery. I have been defeated by a set o' common barn owls, 4 shiny eggs and funny folk. I just wanted to be normal again but I fear "normal" is too high a stretch for me, ultimately, so I will just relinquish control and have fun with it. Please don't inform my husband as I think he's had a good day and I'll be darned if I'm telling the poor man. I wonder how many days I can pull this sham off. It'll be fun and I'm up for the challenge! I'm sure my sponsor will be highly disappointed that I will not make all the steps now. Isn't telling the truth one of the steps? Thanks. He only has granddaughters and she is the only one that shares the same love as him for those old mules. LOL

He got a new one (Pearl). Once he worked her she didn't like to be caught because she knew she was going to have to pull that wagon. They tried for weeks to catch her to put a longer lead on her so it would be easier to get her when they did want to work her. I took Megan to the barn and within 10 or 15 mintues Pearl was on a longer lead 😊 All she wanted was a carrot & a nice brushing!

Maybe you were using the split screen? Or you have more than one internet window open? That's what I do: I have three windows, one tall skinny one with the chat, one small one with Molly and another small one with OB2 so I can see McGeefly in. It was wonderful last night to see him sitting on the deck outside the owl box door for a long time.

Yesterday, 15:27:52 - Flag - Like - Reply

KB / Owlo

What ever you click on to open an internet screen, just click on it 3 times. Then size each screen so they all fit together. You can chat without ever missing any action! Be sure to mute the sound on all but one screen or you'll get a terrible echo.

If you are using Google Chrome, you can open 3 tabs, set your window size to whatever you want for the chat, then drag each tab out to the side and it will automatically open a new window. May sound complicated but once you try it you'll see it's fast and easy.

Let me know if you have any problems and I'll walk you through it.

Pam, you ain't seen nothing yet! You will be in awe of what you'll see transpire here...the beauty of nature will take your breath away. And the people on this board are the kindest, most caring, considerate and sweetest people you will ever encounter on any message board...intelligent as well.

So, Fasten your seat-belt...for this will be a memory you will savor the rest of your life!

I know what you are saying Janeen and I get the wink, but don't you think that's one of the best and most amazing things about this? That Molly and McGee ARE common barn owls. There are thousands and thousands of fabulous owls EVERYWHERE! Life is amazing; nature is amazing... and it's all common and surrounding us everywhere and everyday. This story of Molly's is played out in nests daily, almost year round. Probably there's a nest within a mile of your house. Our window into Molly's world is really a window into every nest.

I just got home from work but I received the news from the Molly Blog by cell phone around 9:30 this morning! I was quietly checking my email by phone when I read it and blurted out: "OMG!!! I can't believe it!". The room fell silent and everyone looked at me. I apologized and said it was a personal message!

Of course, I'm very excited about the news and thrilled with the excellent camera views. I found this site the first time just before Wesley hatched so I feel like I just got a 'do over'. Now I can see it all happen.

Its kinda sad, but kinda great, but kinda sad to say that I genuinely wondered if Donna and Carlos could pull themselves away from Molly's 2nd clutch. Gosh, it would be the same emotional strain (at least to me) to leave the family pet alone for any length of time regardless of Knowing there will be plenty of food, Knowing Molly is safe in The Owlbox, and Assuming McGee is safe in his travels.

Blessed their beloved hearts that they chose to forego a Much Deserved vacation to be there for M&M during this 2nd clutch. May we all remember that should a camera go down for a day or a week or whatever.... They have made a personal sacrifice and I sure hope we viewers will continue to remind each other what a blessing we have been given by the opportunity to watch ANY of the 2nd clutch...

OK, off my podium and on to LETS ENJOY M&M!!!!

Hi all, well it's so good to be back. I'm just concerned about the heat of the box. This seems to be the main draw back of man made boxes especially in the Californian climate. I worry for Molly's wellbeing - it must be agony sitting there during the day.

Hi Barbara! 😊 Its good to see you again!! I think Molly is OK - Carlos has put up some extra insulation on the outside of the 'hot' side of the box which must be helping - having watched some of the other Owl Sites over the last few weeks, particularly the Tel Aviv ones (before I lost the picture!) they looked a lot more uncomfortable than Molly does!

I think she will be fine, Barbara. Barn owls nest and have boxes in far hotter places. They instinctively know how to regulate their body heat by panting and lifting their wings and owls have a much higher "normal" temperature than we do - I think their normal temp is about 104 degrees. She will have the benefit of cooler weather through the night.

Molly's brunch brought to mind the easy way to debone a chicken breast... on hard surface(cutting board) place chicken breast bone side down...cover with wax paper or saran wrap to prevent splatter Get wine bottle, swig some wine, smack chicken breast with wine bottle, could use rolling pin...not much fun in that... Swig some more wine, hit chicken breast again...continue until you have enough of either... Bones pull easily away from breast meat if you can still manage that...

Great therapy if you name each chicken breast before pounding!!! 😊😊😊😊😊

Have you been able to find other books there, Jan. We've had great luck there - not always the newest and latest books, but many we were looking for. That makes me think, I placed an order for several of Margaret Coel's books from them quite some time ago and I haven't gotten them. I KNOW I put our Maine address as a ship to address. I sure hope they didn't mail it to the FL address as there is no one there. Guess I need to check right away.

Thanks! I do love taking pictures, but it's better if people like seeing them! As we're hand rearing this little owlet we're making sure it experiences as many different stimuli as possible when it is young. Owls develop most in the first year of life, after that everything they need to know for survival is pretty much learned. As this one may live and work with us for many years (hopefully!) we want 'him' to be a social and steady bird. 😊

There was some chat earlier about why owls (and all birds) turn their eggs. Some good answers there. lissanne, also brought up a good point about reptile eggs. This is one of many Google articles about the transfer of turtle eggs from the Gulf Coast to the East Coast of Florida. There has also been news footage on several stations. It explains how the turtle eggs are carefully dug out by hand, how each egg is carefully marked on the top so that it stays in that position, that careful, temperature controlled transit, etc.

So far Fidget isn't too much of a handful, 'he' has only just started to walk, but the difference in alertness since last week is amazing. We're hand rearing 'him' as it was the smallest of a brood in a nest on the ground in one of our aviaries. We were concerned about the amount of rain first of all. Then we tried an experiment to get the female to 'foster' parent a wild Barn Owl owlet brought in to our hospital. We couldn't return the wild one as the site was unsafe for ladders. The foster rearing worked well but the wild owlet is at least a week older than Fidget's older sibling. We were then worried that the 'runt' wasn't being fed with the larger owlets demanding all the attention. Reluctantly we removed the 'runt'. Just as well really as the storm of last week was too much for the sibling. The wild owlet was big enough to survive but has been taken back to the area it came from to a soft release pen.

So if left in the aviary, 'Fidget' would have died in the bad storm last week. 😞 It's unfortunate that 'he' will be an imprint and unable to be released to the wild (there's also a legal ban on doing this at present), at least 'he' is alive and will be an ambassador for his feathered kind meeting people and dazzling them with how amazing Barn Owls are! 😊

I tasted the Red Velvet Cake at Costco and thought it was very good. Also, Yoplait Yogurt Company makes a Red Velvet Cake flavor in the Yoplait Light line. Also, very good when you just want to have something sweet tasting and to me it tastes like Red Velvet Cake! Seems like Red Velvet Cake used to be just for holiday time, but now it is for everyday as I see it all throughout the year.

I have gotten that flavor as well. To me it does taste like Boston Cream Pie. Even my husband who hates anything diet or Light tried the Boston Cream Pie flavor and said it did taste like the pie. He loves Boston Cream Pie. To me these flavors are the closest thing to the desserts when you don't want to or can't indulge in the real thing. Also, Yoplait Light & Creamy makes a Cinnamon Roll flavored one too. I have four in the refrigerator but have not tried them yet. Sometimes for breakfast I will just put in like 2 tablespoons of Grape Nuts cereal into my yogurt and stir it up. Makes it last longer and is satisfying. Especially on these hot days all of us are having. I thought the Grape Nuts would taste or go well with the Cinnamon Roll flavor. Maybe tomorrow I will try them together!

Leslee - Red-tails also eat voles, mice, rats, rabbits, squirrels, frogs -- anything they can catch! But if the Red-tails are in an area with an abundance of birds, and the birds are easy pickings (as is the case with the Red-tails and pigeons in Central Park) - they they'll go after the birds.

Living where I do, I have witnessed birds of prey often eating other birds. We have cooper's hawks, red tail hawks, etc. around and they go after the poor sweet Mourning Doves. I hate that. We were gone on a long trip not too long ago and when we came home I knew this is what had happened as there was the imprint of a bird with its wings spread out and particles of injury (if you know what I mean) on one of our windows. That window had a shade pulled down on it. The birds of prey will often cause the bird they go after to crash into the side of a building or window so it knocks the bird silly and they just fall and then the hawk or whatever just takes the poor bird away and chows down. I hated learning myself that birds ate other birds. Roadrunners to the same too. We have a roadrunner that frequents the bird feeding area. He also looks for lizards and sometimes helps himself to the water I have out for all the birds.

Well, Cheryl, Barn Owls are fantastic hunters and non-specialists when it comes to prey. Opportunity is everything, and they make the most of it. That's probably a big reason for their being common around the world. Adaptability is the name of the game in natural selection!

I have Lenten roses and Christmas roses, Cheryl, but the Christmas roses are a bit delicate for the Atlanta heat. I have to nurture them like crazy and even then they have a high mortality rate. But you're right: the Lenten roses are total workhorses. There is never a time of the year when they aren't pretty. Do I remember that you had some in your wedding bouquet? Along with the daffodils and aucuba?

I'm afraid they would NOT like the heat and wind on my fire escape, Mollie - It has full southern exposure, and with the sun so high in the sky, the neighboring tree gives it no shade. The setting can be very hard on plants. Last year the garden thrived on plenty of rain; this summer it's a hot-wind-dried disaster!

I think I have come up with a personal plan to not spend so much time on this site this second time around.

I will exercise with my pc turned off.

I will take longer walks and only take my low-end cell phone, which does not have internet access.

I will sleep longer hours at regular intervals.

I will try to stop telling myself lies.

I just received and printed Vacadude's magnum opus and it is soooo worth $10! Far more extensive than I expected - 58 pages with plenty of drawings and text, extremely well done, I love it! If you get it, you only get one chance to print it and I highly recommend arranging things so you can print it on really good paper in a really good color printer.

And, anybody working with children should have it because it's an inspiration for keeping a drawing and writing journal.

TRYSTAN - Here is my speculation about her restlessness. Does it hold any water?

"I think her restlessness is simply a part of making the huge adjustment from vigorous physical activity to the passive activity in the owl box. I said last night that her unexercised muscles must be twitching for activity!! I think she'll settle down as her body adjusts to her new status. My opinion only!"

Yeah it could be. It could have something to do with the heat in the box too. First time round she built up all that mess of pellets and stuff, this time round it's already there and will be adding insulating, raising the temp in the box too. Will be a combination of things. Like I say I'd be more concerned if she doesn't settle more in the cool of the evening and night.

Pursja and Joan - the thread about brea is pretty far down in the chat now, so I'll repost my comment again:

"I'm not certain of the exact recipe that JH posted (I forgot to copy it too I guess), so hope he reposts it. Here is the web site he uses a lot <http://www.thefreshloaf.com/> and you can search Steakhouse Bread. Here is another that I found which is similar, but also uses rye flour as well as the wheat and white flour <http://allrecipes.com/Recipe/steakhouse-black-bread/Detail.aspx> "

JH (Wandering Blues) has commented Thursday, July 15, 2010, 16:36:26

Lynda, I looked up the sweet wheat bred recipe that I have thumbtacked to my kitchen wall. This is the one I start with. Note that I originally tried this one because I too use the bread machine to do a lot of my kneading. The bread maker was given to me, so why not use it for something! Anyway, I substitute molasses in place of the honey (tried both and I do like the honey also) and I use actual espresso grind coffee, instead of dried instant coffee. I also add cinnamon (pretty often) and use flax seed, sometimes in the dough but always to coat the top and bottom. That toasts up nice and keeps the dough from sticking to my oven stone. No loaf pans, just plop it on the stone and end up with a big crusty boule.

Thanks Lynda C! I'll struggle around the interwebs and see what I can find, and then find the wrong recipe, which would turn out like sawdust, and use up all my precious resources and make me feel inadequate and then I'll never bake again and I'll sit around eating Wonder Bread (because by now I will have lost my job from my general malaise and feelings of baking inadequacy).

Oh, if only James were on and would post the darn recipe, for da gooness sake....

But apparently that will never happen..... 😞

Hiya! Chocolate is doing fine, though was a bit wet today as it's been raining the last couple of days. I'm looking after the Barn Owl that we're rearing a couple of nights a week. Most of us are calling it 'Fidget' at the moment, but we don't know if it's male or female yet. It's around five or six weeks old and quite small so popular opinion is it's a male. 😊

Hehe well it is pretty cool to be looking after an owlet at home. My cats come and go and after inspecting it each day (maybe seeing how much it's grown) they then ignore it really. It's funny, I went for a shower a little while ago and left Molly cam on the computer screen. When I came back in the room Fidget had shuffled out of 'his' box and was sat in the middle of the floor looking up at the screen :D

watching Molly at lunch reminds me -- I was vacationing on Cape Cod, and there were bunnies everywhere! The most bunnies I have ever seen. There used to be coyotes, but that population is way down, and the bunny population way up.

I looked at the local Audbon information, and there are no barn owls on Cape Cod, although a friend of mine remembers a different owl in Brewster. I will eventually followup on this, and perhaps get an owl box going in Chatham, Mass.

Chatham is better than ever -- the storms continually change the sands, and now South Beach is connected to the mainland, so you can hike down ten miles, or take a boat over from Morris Island. It's so beautiful. I have to find out why owls don't make it their home, especially with the abundant food supply.

It was good... finally got my lawn mowed last night and then had to race home to try and catch Molly. It was great down there.... got to listen to Biff play out on the deck at Alderbrook, watched my favorite band, went to the auction for the new church and got the lawn mowed. I took pictures for all of them... now I need to get them fixed a bit and back to them... oh... I even got to crash a wedding at Alderbrook. I do that all the time... stand back and take pictures and then get their email address and send them to them. Now the nice weather is coming. Wish I would have watered my plants....

Hi Colleen. Double clutching can certainly be hard on the transmission if you don't have your technique and timing just right. Shift into low gear and idle, I say - let the torque pull you through it. High revving and jackrabbit starts only lead to early burnout and seized pistons. Better to run like a Deere, and run forever, than to plow your way through like a runaway Bush Hog. Oh, look at the time! I must get out and cut some hay... 😊

It takes a bit getting used to and doesn't always work out the way it is intended. If you are replying to a certain comment, you usually use the "reply" feature right underneath. But if the comment has disappeared from the screen and gone way down into the "basement" as we call it, you can also juts put it at the top and reference the comment below.

I have a snag in my yard that would be perfect for an owl - but it's starting to lean (we've had flickers and nuthatches - bird condo) and afraid we may need to cut it down so it doesn't fall on the neighbors fence. Will I be able to see your replies if I log off? Thanks for any and all help!!

You're doing great Caryn !! Good info from both Becky and Chris above. In case, Becky doesn't see this, yes your comments and replies will still be there after you log off. The comments and replies will continue almost forever 😊. That's what Chris meant by the "basement". You can scroll down, click "more" and get to earlier posts. However, after trying to scroll down too far - especially when the chat room is very busy, your screen often freezes up. Another thing you might have to do when the chat room is busy is "Refresh" or reboot your computer when things lock up or you can't see the video.

Thanks, but I'm simply being selfish this time, really. I think everyone involved in the Wiki (and the meetups!) has gone out of their way and you all are to be commended for being so well organized and dedicated. But, all things considered, I doubt any of us could keep that same level of commitment a second time through, and have it be remotely the same. So sit back and relax, and take it all in. We have a wealth of resources now to point newcomers to. Maybe some new addicts will show up and take ownership of an even better plan. (but I doubt it!) 😊

I think everyone will understand where both you and JH are coming from, Chris, and appreciate all the time that was put into it. If we want to continue saving the PDF's someone else might be willing to do it. Sorry, it can't be me. I have a hard enough job just managing my way around my computer and would be absolutely useless in something that complicated.

i'm happy that we will be able to see molly's second clutch! but a part of me feels bad that carlos and donna felt they had to cancel their vacation to do this for all of us! i know, they are still going to do short trips around where they live - but that's not quite the same as actually going away for a prolonged period of time! still, i'm extremely grateful for being able to have this window into molly's world again!

I think Donna wants to go to Canada to see the flowers in the spring. So maybe they thought they would hang close and broadcast this one so they aren't stuck here come spring. They had planned to go there this year and canceled because of the 1st clutch.

Hello from sunny Sarasota. What a wonderful surprise! On Molly's box blog Carlos says he and Donna are planning to stay in San Marcos for the summer so will be broadcasting Molly's second clutch. You can read what he said on the blog. Just wanted to let you all know in case you hadn't seen the post. Earlier people (including me) were wondering what was going on with the live broadcast.

Hi everyone, just checking in here after reading the Molly Blog and finding out that we can once again, watch nature!! How exciting and nice is this? I also enjoyed watching the first clutch of owls and look forward to checking in on 'batch number 2' --- it is so nice to know that Molly loves the house that was built for her so much that she has claimed it as her own - even if it took 2 years for her to find it!

Love everyone's owl puns...and to see where everyone is from. Thanks for the help - guess I'll catch on...I see a WA fan from Purdy. See you all/owl later...this is great. How do you get to watch on your phone. Lorrri? (I know they have picture boxes now HA) but do you have to do something special? Does it cost extra? I have a work cell so don't want to add to their phone bill...if you know what I mean. Thx.

Gone With the Wind, needless to say. Read that for the first time when I was about 10, and that was my first all nighter so far as I can recollect! Have read it many times since then. Love the classics, love romances, love mysteries. I recently read Baby Proof by Emily Giffin and did not like it as much as Love the One You're With, Something Borrowed, or Something Blue. I liked those a lot. I'm looking forward to reading Heart of the Matter but haven't gotten it yet.

The great thing about Something Borrowed and Something Blue is that each book is about 2 women who are best friends who have a falling out. One book is told from the point of view of one of the women, and the other book is told from the point of view of the other woman. Absolutely delightful fascinating! What a great technique.

Merritt...I've always held a fond spot in my heart for you because you were the first one to welcome me into this family when I finally built up the courage to post my first comment. I was aware that you were a "top cat" on this site before I took the plunge so I was very honored that YOU were the one to welcome me. I understand that you are a novelist? Are your books on Amazon? Can you give us the title(s). Love, Kathleen

Dear Sweet Kathleen. Thank you so much. I am indeed writing my second novel now (which I had come to a stopping point on when I began watching Molly the first time), but I have not yet had my first novel published. I don't want to pursue publication until I have the second one written. I don't want to be a one hit wonder! I wrote my first short story when I was 6 about a little rain drop that fell from the sky onto a girl's pink umbrella, dripped to the ground where it ran into the gutter, got washed out to sea and was evaporated back home into a cloud again. Evidently we were learning about evaporation in 1st grade at that time. 😊 I still have that story, and have always wanted to be a writer. Now that I'm all grown up I finally get to be one (whether or not I'm ever published!). 😊

Donna and I have decided we will just spend our vacation this year in and around San Marcos/San Diego, a beautiful place, and broadcast The Owl Box "Molly's Second Clutch." We don't plan to spend 24 hours a day like we did with the first clutch but you should get plenty of viewing time. Like they say, the first time is special. Carlos

I figured that Donna and I we spent over 2,500 hours broadcasting the first clutch. We are not complaining just letting you know it takes more than just plugging in the camera for you to see Molly and McGee. If it goes off the air, which it does, we might not be around to fix the problem right away. Just be patience we will get it back on the air when we return.

We have removed the P.O. Box. not that we don't enjoy the cards and letters but we just don't have the time to respond to them all. The best place to leave us a note is right here on Molly's Box Blog. You can support the broadcast by visiting our CafePress site and buying something you like or you can help send Austin to College by purchasing Molly's Story a documentary on DVD, 100% of those sales goes into Austin's College Fund.

WOW, exciting news on the blog and in the chat room this morning. I peeked in earlier, just before the "breaking news" and saw Molly still up on the cam. Just now took a few minutes to head to the basement. That was just like old times, too. I didn't think I'd ever get down all those flights of stairs 😊. I didn't stop and post many "likes" on the way up, but I did LIKE all the news, pictures, birthday and anniversary wishes, etc. Such fun last night to see and chat with so many old "faces" and some new ones, too. We finally had a break in the heat wave yesterday - cooler, drier and a wonderful breeze. A little much-needed rain today will green up the lawns and make the garden plants happy. Life is GOOD!! Have a wonderful day.

We're out of town and I haven't checked in since Thursday. The first words I saw on the Blog page were 'broadcasting second clutch' and my heart soared! I got very emotional, teared up, and my heart started pounding. I couldn't believe my reaction! I missed this site too much for words. Thank you Carlos and Donna!! What a sacrifice you are making for all the MOD's! We appreciate the two of you and being able to view more little miracles in the making more than you can know! I was a lurker on the last round, but am planning to 'get to know' all of you this time around. This is a wonderful group of people - one of the best places I have ever 'lurked;!! 😊

Didn't realize how much catching up I had to do by not being on the computer for one day. Finally got thru all the e-mails and caught up in my scrabble games. Took extra time also because I had to keep checking back on Molly just to be sure it wasn't my imagination that she is still really here. Been so depressed trying to live through this horrible heat and not sleeping very well at night but now there is happiness where grumpiness was as I have Molly to watch again.

Smiles abound once again, I will survive.

James, do you have my favorite, Propofol??

Yesterday, 07:55:09 - Flag - Like - Reply

JH (Broken News)

Hmmm...

Propofol - a short-acting, intravenously administered hypnotic agent.
Its uses include the induction and maintenance of general anesthesia and sedation.

In recreational use:

Short-term effects include mild euphoria, hallucinations, and disinhibition.

Long-term use has been reported to result in addiction.

I think it's safe to say we have all that covered... without the IV.

But I think a steady drip dose of reality would come in handy from time to time...

Carlos, I'm so happy that you decided to let us see this wonderful part of nature. You have my thanks and admiration. I hope that you and Donna are enjoying life while you are giving us this wonderful gift. I make the rounds of all the wildlife webcams at least twice a day. I love it. I spend the most time on the Molly webcam. Thanks again, Carlos and Donna. We appreciate it. Good morning, What a treat to see Molly again live and in beautiful living color. I didn't have time yesterday to be on the computer but did check in at one time to get the web site address of the TA owls so that my son could figure out the plug-in I needed. Haven't had time to check it out yet but I saw Molly was back. Now that the party is over (whew) I can spend more time again here.

arty was great until the end when my older brother left and hit a pvc post with a faucet and broke it off. I didn't know about it until one of the other relatives said water is spurting in the air. Now the water is shut off to those faucets until I can get it fixed.

Hi Candace! 😊 I don't reckon she'll have any more now - its been 5 days since the last one was laid and normally the longest gap between them is 3 days - and judging by the last brood - in owl terms - I'm not so sure that more bonding has that much to do with laying more eggs (well obviously it plays a part initially!)

Good morning Candace. I don't think Molly could ever lay the same amount of eggs as McGee's bondings. 😊 But then McGee is just a young growing boy, and the end result of all this bonding is not the first thing on his mind. I'm surprised he doesn't remember all the work he had to do to keep the last clutch fed. 😊

Always more copulations than numbers of eggs laid - to make sure that all eggs are fertilized. Still, in spite of the effort 😊 some eggs still turn out to be infertile.

Candace, you are 100% right! I think everyone should be required to spend a year of their lives on a farm - with plenty of farm animals around, doing what comes naturally 😊 An owl is an owl, not a human; a horse is a horse, not a human; etc., etc., etc. BTW, the interesting thing is that in the vast majority of cases there's the phenomenon known as 'female choice'. If Molly didn't want McGee's attention, he wouldn't have a chance. If a mare is not ready for the stallion she will kick the living daylight out of him.

Elliott: sometimes he will just step on her back and step right off; in other cases you get actual copulation. Occurs in many birds. All part of keeping a strong pair bond.

Guess I realize and knew all that ... just after the entire last brood NEVER saw McGee bare down on her head (of feathers) like that ... but then again I had also missed the egg mode prehatch ... so maybe this did happen in early clutch last go-round too. I dunno. anyone?

Yesterday, 07:09:56 – Flag – Like – Reply

Ruth: I saw the first encounter last night. It was definitely a copulation (you can see his tail rotate). Have a feeling that's when he needs to hang on for balance. Not so for the mere 'step-ons'. In any event - nothing to worry about, it's all completely normal. Also, notice that Molly invites the 'attention' by assuming the 'stance'.

We had a guinea pig when I first moved in here which was supposed to be the boys - but guess who ended up feeding it and cleaning it out etc - and I couldn't let it live outside in the winter 'cos I'm too soft so it would have to live in the house and there really is no room to put it!!!! Sure you will, Bonnie! 14 hours of Owl time, offset by 14 hours of "productive" time. That's a 28-hour day for starters. Then of course there's that pesky sleep time! 🤪

Hello, Dear Natalie! Well, bring a couple of long extension cords, and maybe the restaurant will let you plug in. Of course you'll probably have to take out liability insurance for other patrons who might stumble over the cords and knock their teeth out!

She is fierce in her love and protection of me....

Farmer Jim found her one night when he was out to one of the few night meetings he had to go to...

She had been left at a stop sign down the road from our farm...he opened the door of the car to go find her...

When he turned around, she was sitting the back seat, about 4 mos. old...Chow/Shepherd mix...

He came home brought me out of house at 9:30 pm...pointed to his old car and said we don't have to keep it...

I looked toward the back of the car and there were the backs of those fuzzy ears...rest is history...

While sitting on my lap she growl at him the next morning...been that way ever since...

McGee has come later in the evening...I've seen him closer to 10 p.m. Pacific time. They've switched to the night cam. I actually like it because it gets a closer view of Molly.
