so is mine, Darlene...I haven't known that long either. I was already feeling bad about some things and then I found out.

I asked DH to bring the box of kleenexes up here and I've already used several.

This is heartbreaking news and a shock as we all thought Molly and McGee would be with us for a good long time. Thanks to Carlos and Donna for opening our eyes and hearts to the beautiful world of barn owls. I feel sure that McGee is flying free and hunting and doing owly things, and is reunited with his offspring who passed. Three cheers for McGee, the most handsome and loving mate a girl could have!

I am working on a tribute page for McGee on the Molly the Owl's wiki. If you have a haiku or something else to contribute, you may post it here and I will check back. I might not be able to include everything, but I would like to capture as much as I can. I will also be collecting a PDF of the chat here is it is still possible to do so and saving that to the wiki.

For those who are not familiar, that was started with the first clutch of Molly & McGee to collect information and resources from and for the Sportsman's Paradise Online Molly & McGee site specifically. <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com>

Trystan, our resident owl expert (works with owls in Scotland) notes on fb that it is early in the season. If the food supply is plentiful enough, it's possible Molly may find another male to pair with. He also says that although males try to draw females to nest sites of their choosing, the female often makes her own decision and brings HIM along. Since she's been successful with this box, it doesn't seem unlikely that she could choose to return, if she can find a suitable mate.

I am saddened by the loss of McGee, a barn owl like no other when it came to beauty! He was a perfect specimen of an owl. I am gladdened that we got to know him, share him, and see that his genes live on in the form of his offspring. My favorite, Carrie, will hopefully breed babies that look like their grandpa. I have no doubt Molly, as pretty as she is, will find another mate and carry on. We will have memories and moments to help us through. McGee now stands at the Rainbow Bridge to welcome and escort all of our furkidz...and there is peace in knowing that.

Goodnight, MODs. As Connie said, blessings on thee, as we all share stricken thoughts about the loss of McGee and the 4th clutch. Trystan, who works with owls in Scotland, has noted on fb that it's not impossible that Molly could pair with another male, perhaps even before season's end, with the plentiful food supply and the earliness in the breeding season. Another MOD has included her comforting thought that McGee is with James, who loved them so much from the beginning.

Love to all. See thee on the morrow. ---- -----Ellie

So very heartbreaking...Thank you so much, EFS, for the candles...I lit one and felt a bit comforted in being able to do something. I thought, too, of James with McGee. There are no words to express what Molly and McGee meant to all of us MODs who were there from the beginning....a once in a lifetime experience...and here we are two years later still together. I loved that wonderful, little owl family and my heart aches for Molly who lost her McGee and her babies. She is incredibly sweet and gentle.

Tears of sadness shed with a heavy heart. Molly and Mcgee started all of this for me. They were the first and always the favorite. The MOD's help me thru a difficult time when I lost Larry last year. There was a beautiful floral memorial given by one of our members in the name of all MODs that was at the funeral home. I was so taken back and so honored by that. It wouldn't have happened if not for this owl couple. It is a part of my life. My family mourns with me tonight.

Hey there Connie, Oh My what pain we share this evening....I remember the journey you and your Larry had to navigate through last year. I am so heartsick. I never even thought of losing one of our owls. I am so appreciative of Carlos giving us the news. He was always so upstanding in all the months of viewing our owls.

I've been online at a wildlife center rehab.& an eagle cam.Last year the beloved momma eagle was killed by an airplane.She left a bewildered mate and 3 eagletts. The eagletts were sent to the wildlife center and have fledged.One eaglett was hit by a vehicle a few months after her release. She is recovering and it is hoped she can be released.The pain of our Mcgee has really taken a tole on me this evening.I hope you are well dear Connie.

My tip is not household it is personal.My husband decided he needed to lose weight 2 and a half wks. ago.He calls it a lifestyle change and I call it the willpower diet.We have a gym at work and in 8 yrs. there I never use it.I only live 3 miles down the rd.,so everyday I make myself go in early and I'm even going on my days off except Sunday.I've cut back on portion sizes and trying to eat healthier food.When I just have to have chocolate I have a granola thin.They are delicious!I have been walking on the tread mill and also using the excersize equipment.My DH has lost 15 lbs. and I have lost 6 lbs.Men always take it off faster.So I guess after all these yrs.,I've found the right diet.The willpower diet.Oh I have been going to the gym for 9 days now except for Sunday.

Good luck with your diets Cathy. I like the name your husband calls your diet....."Lifestyle change". We try to eat healthy too, and I know I should exercise.

Wow, excellent. Last year my DH made a lifestyle change because the heart doctor got on to him. So it has taken him 15 months to loose 115 lbs. It has changed both of us. I've lost 55 in that 15 months just trying to follow him. He goes to the gym three times a week and walks the dog. Since I have diabetic feet and they hurt and the knee's kill me, I don't walk or exercise like him. But I'm trying to change the food part. Good luck and just take one day at a time because you don't know what tomorrow will bring. The heart doctor said don't use the word diet because most people fail with that word. That makes sense. Hugs to you sweet gal.

I have learned so much watching the SPO cams for almost two years! I don't know where to begin! Computer wise, I didn't even know how to copy and paste. I am still learning the computer, and am very far from an expert. I will have to think about this question of the week! Thanks Sweet Tea! It is a good one!

I was just over at the Eagle site in White Rock and I am really worried about her, she is sitting on a egg and the wind is blowing so hard I will be surprised if the tree will stay standing. She just flew away I don't see an egg but she was sitting there.

Hi Darlene. What windy stormy weather they are having in White Rock BC. That poor eagle nest might not make it. Nature can be so cruel sometimes. Are you having the bad storms in your area of BC?

Hi Tea, we do have some wind but nothing like they have out at the coast. They even stopped the ferries from running and some people are without power. I am glad we are about 300 miles from all that weather. I sure am going to have to do some thinking about your question, it is a good one and it will be nice to get some new ideas and hints.

Hi Darlene, goodness it does have bad winds. The eagles a smart bird and I'm sure that she went to a safer place. I heard that that coast was having bad winds. I'm glad you live far enough way that you don't get it. I hope that Chris and Becky are far away also. Hugs.

Goodmorning friends. Well after thinking of what I do, here are a couple of tips: 1) Use 1/2 cup of baking soda, 1/2 cup of hot white distilled vinegar and put it down your garbage disposal. 2) Clean your coffee pot out by running vinegar through it. 3) I put my dryer sheets in my underwear drawers, and in my linen closet & in my tennis shoes to keep things fresh smelling. The best one yet is to get a cleaning lady once a week or so. I want one of them....ha ha ha. When I worked full time I did have one come in every other week for the stuff I didn't like to do. She was worth every penny to me. Have a great day. I am on my way to the nursing home to visit my mother inlaw. Hugs to all. So happy to see my friend Cathy...😊

I don't have a GD, but I use the baking soda and vinegar just to keep my drains fresh and running! But I don't heat the vinegar. Will try that next time! I just run hot water down the drain afterward. Great tip!

Hi Lois. I do like your hints.....and you said you did not have any? I will try the vinegar in my stainless steel coffee pot next time it needs a cleaning.
