I couldn't afford the photo book of Molly and McGee so I bought the children's book. For me!!! I just went down and wrote the story of how it ended on one of the pages. Wish I had the photo book. Those who do must be loving it right now.

I am so saddened by the news of McGee's disappearance. Molly and McGee began this magical journey for so many friends around the world. McGee's caring devotion to Molly and his owlets was a lesson in life to all of us. I am also so saddened that there are still cold-hearted people here who refuse to allow us to show our grief for the loss of this magnificent owl.

Oh my God, i was away for two days and just learned that our beloved McGee has left us and his Molly and what would have been their four family. I'm so sad and the tears are flowing down my cheeks. So sad, so very sad for Carlos, Donna, And Austin and all of us Mods who loved them all so much and thankful that through Carlos and Donna and Austin we all got to know and love them so and each and every little owlet they raised to fledge. I feel like I have a hole in my heart as we have to say goodbye to our wonderful McGee, may he fly free and some day have his beloved Molly join him over the Rainbow bridge. Molly and McGee is where this wonderful journey all began with the owls and each other. My heart is breaking and these owls will always remain in my heart as they are why we all are together and a family now. RIP Leggs McGee you will always be a loving memory in all of our hearts. We shall never forget you and your Molly and all of the owlets you both produced. My heart goes out to the Royals and all of you my owl family. ♥♥♥

Goodnight everyone. I need to go and chill. I want to let you all know I am so grateful for McGee and Molly. When I first saw them I watched them every day, then I started to talk to people on here after about a year. I've met some sweet people on this site and I will be here until it shuts down for good. Black screen or not my heart is still here for Molly. My prayers go out to Carlos & Donna now because I bet they are feeling bad. They've been part of the owls family all this time. I'm heartbroken also Lynn. I know what you and everyone else is feeling. Kind of sick to the tummy, and sad, so sad. Hugs to you my friend.

I am working on a tribute page for McGee on the Molly the Owl's wiki. If you have a haiku or something else to contribute, you may post it here and I will check back. I might not be able to include everything, but I would like to capture as much as I can. I will also be collecting a PDF of the chat here is it is still possible to do so and saving that to the wiki.

For those who are not familiar, that was started with the first clutch of Molly & McGee to collect information and resources from and for the Sportsman's Paradise Online Molly & McGee site specifically. <http://mollyowl.pbworks.com/>

I'm so saddened to learn of the loss of McGee. He & Molly are the web cam that hooked me on the the wildlife cams! Thank you Carlos for all the time and effort you put in to show us these beautiful owls!

My love to everyone here. My love to Carlos and family. Thank you, McGee for your time with us. There will be many tears shed for your loss. May everyone here remember the love we shared and take comfort in the life that gave us so much.

Hi everyone, got the email from Carlos and had to come where other owl lovers would be. It's so so sad, I can't believe it. I'm wondering about Molly. Do you think she'll stay by the box or what will she do now? I love that girl.

Trystan, our resident owl expert (works with owls in Scotland) notes on fb that it is early in the season. If the food supply is plentiful enough, it's possible Molly may find another male to pair with. He also says that although males try to draw females to nest sites of their choosing, the female often makes her own decision and brings HIM along. Since she's been successful with this box, it doesn't seem unlikely that she could choose to return, if she can find a suitable mate.

Thanks so much, EFS..and my thanks to Trystan, too. I so hope she does well and Carlos keeps us updated on whether she's around.
